RUMANIA ATTACKS HUNGARY

HALF FARE TO SCHOOL CHILDREN SOUGHT

Boston is going to ask that Boston school children be carried to school for half-fare.

This request was made at the meeting of the School Board this afternoon by Chairman of the Committee Michael H. Sullivan. He asked permission of the board to draft a bill providing for this lower fare.

This request of Chairman Sullivan's came as the result of a request from the Boston School Board, made to the trustees of the Boston Elevated, last July, that the fare for school children riding on the Elevated's cars be kept at the old price of 5 cents.

This request was made four months ago. It has never been answered by the Elevated trustees. Now the Boston School Committee, and its chairman, Judge Sullivan, weary of delay, will ask the Legislature to reduce the fare of school children from the seven cents, asked by the Elevated trustees, to half fare, the fare paid for school children everywhere else in the State.

Judge Sullivan, speaking for the board, called attention to an anomoly inMassachusetts.

Mr. and Mrs. Parent, do you know that, in every city and town in Massachusetts except Boston, school children are carried to and from school for half fare?

Do you know that, in many towns of our State, the street car company pays half the fare, the town th other half?

LOWER IN OTHER PLACES.

Did you know that it is State law for school children to ride to school for half-fare everywhere but in Boston?

And, have you heard, or do you remember, that, in 1909, by a special act of the Legislature, this rule that children should have reduced rates to school was made an exception of, in the case of Boston, and of Boston alone!

These are some of the questions Judge Sullivan asked the School Board this afternoon, questions the School Board will ask the legislature very shortly. These are the points mentioned to the trustees of the Boston Elevated since last July, points upon which they have taken no action whatsoever.

In default of action by the Elevated trustees, the members of the Boston School Committee beg to put before the fathers and mothers of Boston school children the actual situation.

SYSTEM CENTRALIZED.

"In Boston," as one committeeman explained, "we have put in the centralized school system. This means that we built fewer schools, and better. For it is more efficient to have one good Latin school, where all the boys of the city be prepared for college excellentiy, than twenty Latin schools, conveniently placed, but not so excellent. The same holds true of trades schools, normal schools, English high schools.

"When Boston evolved this centralized system, she took the school from the child," explained the committeeman. "It is therefore the duty of Boston fathers and mothers; of the Boston School Committee, acting for them; of the Legislature, acting where the Elevated Trustees failed to act, to bring the child to the school, which they took from him."

"What is the good of having the best schools in the State if the children of the city haven't the money to pay their fares to reach the schools?" ask Boston's school committeemen.

Captain McConnell Killed Leading Men in Charge

Former Boston Lawyer Was Attacking Machine Gun Nest When Hit by a Shell

Widow of Captain Joseph McConnell, a Boston lawyer, who fell in France. She is at present living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Cletxon, of No. 86 Elm Hill avenue, Roxbury.

How Captain Joseph McConnell, a Boston lawyer, met his death in France while leading a charge against an enemy machine-gun nest was told today in an International News Service dispatch from a correspondent with the American army. The message was delayed in reaching here.

Captain McConnell's widow, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Clexton, the former well known in the eyentuff business, is residing with her parents at No. 86 Elm Hill avenue, Roxbury.

The men, with Captain McConnell at their head, had crept up to the German nest when a heavy artillery shell burst in front of them. It bowled them over, but all escaped injury except Captain McConnell. A part of the bursting shell penetrated his neck, and he died almost instantly.

He was buried near where he fell. Chaplain Michael J. O'Connor, formerly of St. Francis de Sales Church, Roxbury, read the services.

Captain McConnell, who was acting major of the First Battalion, 101st Infantry, was killed on Sept. 12, according to a notification by the War Department to his relatives.

Just a short time before he sailed he was married to Miss Mary Pauline Clexton, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clexton of Roxbury. Colonel Logan was best man at the wedding.

He leaves a wife, two sisters, Katherine and Mary McConnell of Fitchburg, and a brother, James, of Boston.

MOVE TO RESTORE LOGAN

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Colonel Edward L. Logan of the 101st Overseas Regiment was "trimmed good and proper," according to Boston friends. They are up in arms over the affair. They say his retirement has all the earmarks of "a political trick."

This information, it is alleged, was forcibly brought to the attention of Colonel Logan's friends as a result of certain happenings in Boston and New York. The matter leaked out at a conference in a New York hotel Saturday, at which some newspaper men and others were present, it is stated.

That the retirement of Colonel Logan against his wishes will not be dropped, is a foregone conclusion. His Boston friends, who are legion, intend to work tooth and nail and fight hard to have him return from France to Boston at the head of the regiment.

They claim that right is due him. He left Boston at the head of the command, proved himself a soldier of no mean ability, and applied "constructive leadership," it is stated, which endeared him to the men.

Secretary of War Baker will shortly receive a petition signed by prominent Boston men asking him to permit Colonel Logan to lead the regiment again, and o be with it when mustered out here.

It will b pointed out, it is stated, that if Colonel Logan was fit to fight with the regiment from September 9, 1917, to October 26, 1918, a few days before the armistice was signed, he is still qualified to head the command now that there has been a cessation of hostilities.

Mention will be made in this petition, it isstated, that, at the victory meeting in Symphony Hall, presided over by Henry B. Endicott, chairman of the State Public Safety Committee, mention d Colonel Logan's name caused paidemonium to break loose

CLOUDS ON HORIZON OF PEACE

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Clouds are appearing on the peace horizon that promise possible storm before complete agreement is reached. The problems are entirely diplomatic.

The war, of course, is over, as the central powers are disarmed. But the question of policies and representation is today very seriously concerning the Washington administration and the premiers of the big allied governments who will shape the terms and control the vote.

Of course, the representation of the United States will be completely controlled by President Wilson. His desires will dominate it. America's delegates will stand entirely for what the President wants. France will be pledged to Premier Clemenceau's views and hopes. In many problems the votes of the two greatest republics will be cast as a unit.

GEORGE FOR DEMOCRACY.

Should Lloyd George control England, then the danger will be nullified, as he is in absolute accord with the "policies of democracy" as outlined by President Wilson and Premier Clemenceau and himself. But a sharp drive is being made upon the British Premier, not alone in Britain proper, but in the imperial colonies, and much will depend upon the result of the election to be held next month.

Lloyd George has declared for a "non-vindictive peace." There are influential men, leaders, some very influential, who do not hold to this view. And there is real opposition throughout the British empire and in Italy to the league of nations as outlined by the President.

The peace question will prove a problem that may be the biggest issue in the British elections. In consequence it now appears that there can be little actually done in the way of peace conferenie arrangements until after these elections are over.

ARMISTICE IS PROGRESSING.

Much time will be saved, officials here today took occasion to point out, should matters be held in abeyance until it is seen whether the Welsh "little giant" is to continue to shape the destinies of Great Britain. Here in Washington there is supreme confidence that he will. And believing this there is no disposition to unduly hurry peace matters.

The armistice is progressing, the guarantees being carried out as rapidly as possible in both Germany and Austria-Hungary. It will be close to the first of the year before all the demands can be carried out. By that time the allied countries will know what they want done. And it can then be ascertained what force is to dominate the new Germany.

American Soldiers Enter Germany in Triumph

Paris, Nov. 18 (10:30 a. m.).—German troops began evecuating the fortress of Metz today.

A first hand account, by a Bostan man, of the advance of the great army of occupation into Germany, will be given in the AMERICAN by Bert Ford, war correspondent and former member of the AMERICAN'S local staff. Mr. Ford, whose articles direct from the front have given AMERICAN readers many a vivid picture of the actual fighting, is now with the army of occupation. His first article, showing the thrilling reception given to the victors in their historic "hike" toward the Rhine, appears today. It will be followed by further accounts of the American advance.

With the American Army of Occupation, Nov. 18.—The American Army of Occupation is advaneing on a fifty-five-mile front with a French army on our right and another French army on our left.

An American captain and several doughboys entered Spincourt Saturday to take charge of forty-two cannon the Germans had delivered there. They were met by a German officer and a group of German privates and were warmly received. The German officer said he had been fighting four years and he was loud in his praise of the fighting qualities of the doughboys.

BOSTON LOOSES FLOOD OF CASH IN WAR DRIVE

Greater Boston today unloosed a flood of money and got busy putting New England over the top in the great United War Work drive, which ends at midnight.

Early in the day it was officially announced at headquarters that this city and its suburbs had surged past the $4,000,000 mark and was still going stronger than ever.

If Boston passes the $5,000,000 mark, which undoubtedly will be the case, New England will reach its minimum quota and over-subscribe heavily.

SUPREME COURT DENIES APPEAL OF MOONEY

Washington, Nov. 18.—Unless executive clemency intervenes the sentence of execution imposed on Thomas J. Mooney, San Francisco labor leader, convicted of murder in connection with the Preparedness Day bomb outrage, will be carried out.

The Supreme Court of the United States this afternoon denied a petition by Mooney's attorneys asking that the decision of the highest court of California, denying Mooney a new trial, be reviewed by that body. This in affect affirms the California court's decision.

The decision of the Supreme Court was announced by Chief Justice White without comment. Mooney's attorneys contended that the conviction of their client was secured on perjured evidence, and that the California Supreme Court failed to take into account a provision of the Federal constitution declaring that no man shall be deprived of his life or liberty without process of law.

Bay State Will Give Mighty Welcome to Returning 26th

Stirred to action by queries from the Boston AMERICAN office to the executives of every city and town in Massachusetts, every hamlet, village, town and city throughout the Commonwealth is preparing to give its boys of the Twenty-sixth Division a welcome home that will put to shame the elaborate celebrations of Rome for the triumphs of Caesar.

It will not be a series of individual welcomes, nor a scattering of welcomes to individuals, but one great, State-wide celebration, with the entire Commonwealth as host to its men who have fought and bled in France. For the chariots of the conquerors of old were never as welcome as will be the brown leather boots of the 26th Division to Massachusetts.

It will not be a class celebration, but a universal jubilation. Everyone, from the highest official and wealthiest resident to the humblest apprentice will have an equal share in it. It will be typically American, filled with American pep, and carried out with American enthusiasm.

Scarcely had the Boston AMERICAN'S appeal been put on the wires

BOSTON BOUND SHIP REPORTED SINKING

The British steamer Cascapedia Captain Williams, was reported by wireless today in messages received in Boston as in a sinking condition off Cape Race. She carried one passenger, O. K. Nelson, besides her crew and a cargo of beef, shoes, leather and general merchandise, all heavily insured in Boston.

The steamer is one of the boats of the newly-inaugurated service between Boston, Halifax and St. John, N. B., and sailed from Boston on November 9 with several passengers. All but one of these were landed at Halifax.

LODGE BILL WOULD BRAND GERMAN GOODS

CUMMINS WOULD GIVE MEN THEIR UNIFORMS

Washington, Nov. 18 — Senator Cummins of Iowa this afternoon introduced a resolution to give every soldier and sailor the uniform he is wearing at the time of his discharge.

SENATOR LODGE URGES INDEPENDENT POLAND

Washington, Nov. 18.—A resolution seeking to put the Senate on record as favoring the creation of an independent Polish State was introduced this afternoon by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts. The resolution declares it to be the sense of the Senate that the Polish State should include all territory inhabited by "indisputably Polish populations," should have access to the sea and should have its political and economic independence guaranteed by "international covenant."

MOSES IS SEATED IN UNITED STATES SENATE

Washington, Nov. 18.—George H. Moses, Republican, whose election on November 5 to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Jacob H. Gallinger of New Hampshire, is being contested by his Democratic opponent, was sworn in as a member of the Senate this afternoon, despite opposition from the Democratic side.

The plane carried 450 pounds of mail, and is equipped for the flight with a twelve-cylinder Liberty engine. As originally designed for fighting, the machine was to carry seven machine guns and was armored.

VILLAGERS WILDLY CHEER U. S. ARMY MARCHING ON GERMANY

Yankees, Sweeping On Conquered Land, Prepared for Any Emergency

(Spincourt is sixteen miles northeast of Verdun and twenty-six miles northwest of Metz.)

The German soldiers said they were glad the Americans were coming. The two groups lunched together and the Germans shared their last bottle of wine with the Americans.

The civilians invited the doughboys into their homes, but complained of the food shortage. They said they had to brew herbs for sustenance. I saw no artillery horse that had been killed by a shell, quartered by German soldiers for the meat.

The third American army, which is moving towards the Rhine, is composed of the third and fourth army corps. The third corps consists of the second, thirty-second and forty-second divisions. The fourth corps includes the first, third and fourth divisions.

The Americans expect to reach their destination in about a week. The forward movement is general all along the line.

The army today had reached the Ecouvres-Sorbey-Nouraincourt-Marastour line.

Hailed as heroes and liberators of the people, the American army, led by General Joseph Dickman, is moving toward the Rhine in three mighty columns.

The Yankees made nine miles yesterday and then halted. The march will be resumed tomorrow.

General Dickman's host is known as the Third American Army and is advancing in battle formation, supported by airmen and artillery, and ready for any emergency. It is the most historic "hike" that the Stars and Stripes have ever seen.

Everywhere the Yankees were received with open arms by the civilian population, and in towns that the Germans had left only twenty-four hours before the United States flag was blossomed forth upon the buildings.

GERMANS SALUTED FLAG.

It was a heart touching ovation that the doughboys received from men, women and children as they entered evacuated villages. Lagging German soldiers who trailed behind their own forces saluted the American flag and American army officers with profound respect and tried to fraternize with the doughboys.

Britain Must Keep Army on Guard, Says Churchill

London, Nov. 18.—"There is a probability of extensive disorders throughout Europe and we must stand on guard until everything is settled," said Colonel Winston Spencer Churchill, British Munitions Minister, "We may need to maintain considerable armies for a long period," he continued. "Demobilization will not be rapid. The munitions firms everywhere will carry on until further orders.

"The armistice may lead through many thorny paths, but there will be many months of discussion before final peace is signed."

The olive drab of Uncle Sam's marines was a novelty everywhere. Men politely doffed their hats. Women and girls smiled and bowed in their prettiest manner. Grandmothers at windows nodded their banned heads.

Children looked on in amazement at the victorious brown army that followed so closely upon the heels of the German soldiers, the only type of troops they had known since the Teuton invasion over four years ago.

The Americans are ready for the slightest violation of the armistice. Signal corps men are stringing telephone wires along the poles set up by the Germans. The artillerymen at every halt plant their cannon in the fields along the roadside and at the cross roads with neatly piles of deadly shells behind the guns, ready to protect the infantrymen with a barrage on a second's notice.

The weather was bitter cold and cloudy when the doughboys set out doughboys.

The landscape, thick with shell holes, was covered an inch thick with frost.

But the doughboys did not mind the weather nor their heavy packs. All were eager to invade the enemy zones to see the village peoples.

Thousands of Italian, Russian and Polish prisoners, released from German prison cages, flowed in the opposite direction in quest of rest, warmth and food in the American lines.

The influx of prisoners is raising one of the biggest problems confronting our army of occupation. They must be fed. The hungry, ragged, fagged soldiers are given every consideration and are invited to a seat by the hundreds of bon fires that lighted up the landscape. When "chow" was dished up the refugees were invited to participate.

The march is being marked by some of the most striking scenes of the war and they are being stamped indelibly upon the minds of the doughboys.

Some of the Yanks complained that their jaws were getting sore trying to pronounce the names of some of the places they were passing, but the soreness passed away at "chow" time.

HARVEST OF SOUVENIRS.

The Americans are great souvenir hunters and at rest periods they were busy picking up all sorts of discarded German equipment.

Some of them carried signboards and others posters that they had pried from the sides of buildings.

What surprised the doughboys most was the number of American flags fluttering in villages the Germans had left.

Along late in the day when the men began to tire after the strenuous movement of the day the soldiers began throwing away their souvenirs, promising themselves to get more at the end of the march.

During halts the bands gathered at cross-roads and in the fields and played strenuously, but there was no music while the troops were on the march.

Liberated prisoners gathered around the musicians and in pauses of music they surrounded the bonfires and the kitchen "chow gun." All the liberated prisoners are headed for Verdun.

Great Britain to Get Lion's Share of German Fleet

By International News Service.

London, Nov. 18.—(1:35 p. m.)—All of the German warships that must be turned over according to the terms of the armistice will be in allied hands by Saturday, a day earlier than stipulated by the agreement, it was learned on good authority this afternoon.

The ships will be divided among the allies. England, having done the bulk of the naval work, will get the lion's share. King George will witness the surrender of the German dreadnaughts.

CAPTAIN CABOT GIVES EULOGY AT BURIAL

By BERT FORD.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army North of Verdun, Nov. 12 (Delayed).—While American troops were preparing to bury eleven heroes who had fallen in the last burst of fighting before the armistice went into effect the funeral party was astonished at the sight of a dapper young German major with the bearing of an aristocrat and wearing the Iron Cross upon his breast, walking smartly forward from the German lines.

He was accompanied by a captain and an orderly bearing a white flag. Upon the brow of a hill could be seen five horses in charge of two other German orderlies.

MANY LIVES SAVED.

In good English the German major asked to see an American officer of his own rank. A doughboy, who had been detailed as a grave digger, paused shovelling and a group of American soldiers soon surrounded the truce party, whose arrival was most dramatic with such a setting.

Captain Cabot of Cambridge, Mass., an acting major, who had led his battalion in many a day's hard fighting, stepped forward, saying that his acting rank was equal to that of the German's. The Hoche major, with the haughty air of his military caste, was unable to conceal his surprise at the sight of captain in a buck private's uniform and tactlessly exclaimed "What, you a captain!"

The Germans surveyed Captain Cabot from head to foot, but finally explained his mission. He opened a large envelope and drew forth a communication, written in German, which proved to be a description, accompanied by a chart, showing the land mines just ahead of the New England troops. Had fighting lasted longer it might have meant scores of American lives lost.

SCORES WERE IN PERIL.

The strains of "Nearer, My God, to Thee" flooded Shrapnel Valley, skirting the famous Bois des Caures, north of Verdun, and echoed through the hills, framing the scene of the burial of the Americans who fell in the last hour of fighting.

The 3d Battalion of the 102d Infantry thinned their ranks into a hollow square around the simple grave. Lying side by side, shrouded in olive drab army blankets with Old Glory spread over the centre were the bodies.

The funeral service was held on the summit of a hill which had been taken by the Americans just a few minutes before hostilities ceased. One of the dead had been a lieutenant and a mighty brave fighting man. (His name was omitted by the censor.)

This officer was leading his platoon up the side of a steep hillin the face of violent machine-gun fire and had paused to write a note giving information about the position of German machine-gun nests to its captain when he was shot through the brain.

SCHLESWIG WILL HAVE REFERENDUM AT LAST

London, Nov. 18 (12:45 a. m.).—Dr. Solf, Foreign Secretary in the new German cabinet, has agreed to a referendum vote in Northern Schleswig, said an Exchange telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen today. (Schleswig is the northern part of Schleswig-Holstein which Germany seized from Denmark in 1864.)

HELP BRING BOYS BACK; 5,000 ON SHIPS NEEDED

The United States Shipping Board wants 5,000 men at once to help bring Pershing's men back from France. Anybody between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five, without regard to former assignment or line of craft, or previous experience, may take part in this big ferrying job.

The men will be recruited at the Shipping Board's 650 drug stores and will first be put on ships at Boston, San Francisco, Seattle, New Orleans and Cleveland for six weeks of special training.

After Jan. 1, when the ferrying of troops is expected to have begun in earnest, the men will be sent. The transports not less than 400 firemen a month and sailors, stewards, cooks and coal passers.

Arrangements for bringing back the fighters are being rapidly worked out from the shipping standpoint. The shipping board will supply the transports. What is needed now is 5,000 men to add to the crews already assembled to man the ships.

The shipping board says it hopes that those who sign for this service, insuring as it does a look-in on the big show of the war's end, will remain permanently in the merchant marine after the peace treaty is signed and the army is safely home.

ALL BRUSSELS IS EVACUATED BY GERMANS

London, Nov. 18 (11 a. m.).—Brussels, the capital of Belgium, is now entirely free of Germans. The last Germans left at noon on Saturday, said a dispatch from Amsterdam today.

By JOHN T. PARKERSON.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the British Army on the Western Front, Nov. 18.—Delayed.—Brussels, the seat of the first revolutionary outbreak in the German army, is quieter and the Germans are rapidly clearing out, but some German sentries are still in the streets of the city.

General von Falkenhayn (Von Falkenhayn's has disappeared. No further trouble is feared at Brussels, it is said.

Streams of refugees are pouring toward the city, returning to their old homes. Belgian flags are now openly sold in the streets and the allied colors are worn without fear.

One of the most striking things in Brussels was the cowardly submission of the German officers to the soldiers. Many fled in Holland or escaped in plain clothes to Germany.

SOLDIERS BEG ALMS.

Soldiers with caps in their hands are begging alms in the streets. Many German soldiers have been selling their machine guns for forty francs for souvenirs.

The town of Asche, six miles northwest of Brussels, is completely in ruins as the result of the blowing up of an ammunition train by the Germans on Tuesday night when they heard of the armistice.

The Belgian civilian population is well behaved and has not been contaminated by Bolshevism.

In the last three days and nights the Germans departing from Brussels resembled a long funeral train. Contrasted with this is the long black line of returning refugees moving along the roads to Ghent and Brussels. Every conceivable kind of conveyance is being utilized, but the majority are on foot. In many instances they carry all of their belongings wrapped up in a handkerchief. It is a wonderful and a tragic sight.

PELT ALLIES WITH FLOWERS.

Tens of thousands of Belgians who remained in occupied territory lined the roads waving flags, cheering the passers-by and showering the soldiers with flowers.

Emil Vandervelde, Belgian Minister of Supplies, addressed the populace of Brussels yesterday and returned to Ghent today to confer with the parliamentarians. He said he did not fear any further trouble in Brussels, but that the people are waiting impatiently for the coming of the King and Queen.

Robinson Smith of the American Belgian Relief Commission, who went to Brussels to attend a meeting of the national committee, gave the people the first detailed terms of the armistice. They were printed in a newspaper which Mr. Smith carried with him. There is enough food in Brussels to last for five weeks, Mr. Smith said. Coal and clothing are scarce and bread sells for three dollars a spool.

FLOUR SACKS FOR WINDOWS.

American flour sacks are being distributed to cover the thousands of broken windows.

Many German officers, pale and trembling, called at the offices of the relief committee begging clothing. The commissioners were told by the Germans that Von Hindenburg is still at the head of the army.

Great crowds filled the streets of Brussels yesterday. Burgomaster Max was expected to arrive from Germany and his house was covered with flowers.

Five members of the German council of soldiers sat in the antechamber before a table strewn with empty bottles.

But the saddest sight of all is the little groups of British prisoners, just released from Germany. They are emaciated, their faces are drawn and they are dressed in rags. As they stumble homeward some are so thin and pale that they look like corpses. They had been working for three weeks in mines with nothing to eat but watery soup and a little jam.

Army Job for Worcester Man

Worcester, Nov. 18.—Edward Early of this city has been appointed chief inspector of material purchased by the army at the Northeastern Department. Boston, and commissioned as captain.

Stops Wild Runaway by Daring Leap from Auto

A movie thriller of the most thrilling kind was staged in front of the Ashmont car barns today, and if a camera man had been on hand to "shoot" the scene his fortune would have been made.

Frank Kehoe, chauffeur for District Chief Walter McLean of the Boston fire department, stopped his car in front of a restaurant in Codman square, Dorchester, to get a cup of coffee. Before he could enter the restaurant two large black horses, attached to a Hood's milk wagon, dashed past him in a furious runaway.

Kehoe jumped in his car and chased the team, zig-zagging behind the horses until he had a chance to spurt ahead of them. In front of the frightened animals he stopped his automobile, and then as the horses dashed by he sprang from the running board and grabbed the reins of the nearest horse. He was dragged some distance before he brought the horses to a standstill in front of the Ashmont car barns, in front of which thirty or forty people were standing.

Women shrieked and tried to reach cover as they saw the horses coming. Kehoe brought the animals to a standstill just in time to avoid serious accident.

CHANGES URGED IN ABSENTEE VOTING LAW

That drastic changes are necessary to correct the glaring defects in the absentee voting law, under which thousands of Massachusetts soldiers and sailors of voting age were disqualified from voting at the recent election, was declared today in the official report of the Commission to Collect Votes of Absentee Voters.

Only 3,099 soldier and sailor votes were cast, although, it is estimated, more than 100,000 qualified voters from this State were engaged in the great war.

Although 5,500 Bay State soldiers of voting age were stationed on Election Day at Camp Devens, within thirty miles of the State House, only 800 were permitted by the law to vote.

The commission declared in its report that "many of the provisions of the recent 'absentee voting law tended to disfranchise absent voters and to discourage absent voting."

The law was framed in the dying hours of the last session of the Legislature. Months of delay preceded the hasty action. When the law was finally framed it was found to contain provisions under which the time allowed the soldiers to file their applications to be registered as absentee voters with the Secretary of the State was insufficient to get the application blanks from the secretary's office to the cantonments and back.

Secretary of State Langtry, Charles Baxter and Executive Councillor Lewis R. Sullivan, who constitute the commission, will collaborate with Attorney-General Attwill in the preparation of a new bill to be submitted to the incoming Legislature.

DANIELS MODIFIES ORDER ON RELEASES FROM NAVY

Washington, Nov. 18.—Applicants for discharge from the navy need not necessarily be men who sacrificed business interests or educational courses to enter the service, Secretary Daniels announced today, thus modifying his order of last week, when he stated that the department stood ready to release 50,000 men who desired to return to school or college, or to their business careers. Any man now in this branch of the service may apply for a release, the Secretary said.

WILSON AT FUNERAL OF HAITIEN MINISTER

Washington, Nov. 18.—President Wilson, accompanied by Secretary of State Lansing and Secretary of the Navy Daniels, attended the funeral services of the late United States Minister Frank Haiti, Solen Menos, at 11 o'clock this morning at St. Patrick's Catholic Church. Mr. Menos died in this city November 14 from the effects of pneumonia, following influenza.

While Mrs. Sonia Liberman of No. 7 Courtland road, Mattapan, was washing clothes in her kitchen today, her fifteen-months-old son, Morris, fell into the tub of scalding water. His legs, arms and abdomen were scalded. He was attended by Dr. Myer Berman of Blue Hill avenue and then sent to the City Hospital, where his name was placed on the dangerous list.

REPORT KAISER MAY RETURN TO GERMANY

of the former Kaiser has never been published and deduces therefrom the opinion that he never actually abdicated, but merely fled the country.

Plans for a great Central European republic, dominated from Berlin, to include besides Germany the German-speaking section of Austria, with Switzerland, Holland and possibly Denmark, are under way, the correspondent of the Daily Mail at The Hague telegraphs.

The Times' Amsterdam correspondent charges that the revolutionary movement in Holland was directly inspired by German agents and financed by German capital, seeking to regain trade control lost in the war.

SITUATION TENSE.

The position of the Junkers is not at all clear. Apparently they are standing aside, only seeking to save what they can of their prestige and wealth. But the sympathies of the capitalistic classes apparently are all with the new republic and much of the money which the revolutionaries have, has been supplied by business interests.

Details of the revolutionary movement in Holland sent to the Times, describe a riot in which the revolutionaries fired upon the cavalry barracks in Amsterdam. Seven persons were killed in the fighting which followed.

Red flag parades have been held in Amsterdam, The Hague and other centres and the radicals are preparing to declare a republic. The situation today, though apparently under control of the authorities, is still very tense and fighting may break out at any minute. Many, including German Socialists, have been arrested. No specific charges have been made against many of the prisoners, who are being held rather as a precaution to guard against future disturbances.

From Geneva comes information of mutiny in the ranks of the retiring German soldiers. The Swiss-German border has been sealed by the government and it is now impossible for any one to pass from one country to another.

Many German soldiers were killed in the recent fighting in Brussels, according to the Daily Express. The Amsterdam correspondent of that paper says the German officers have practically no control over the troops now in Belgium. The control has gone over to the Soldiers and Sailors' Council, which are issuing instructions to their commanders. The junior officers generally are in sympathy with the soldiers' and sailors'.

GERMAN ELECTION IN JANUARY.

Dr. Ebert, the German Chancellor, has announced, according to Berlin dispatches, that the elections will take place in January. The Chancellor stated he did not believe it necessary to delay the peace conference until the German National Constituent Assembly has decided upon Germany's definitive form of government.

The Socialist organ Vorwaerts reveals that the recent German revolution was preached on October 23 last by an unsuccessful attempt along similar lines. The German high seas fleet ordered that day to go out and engage the Allied and American navies. Just before the time set for the dash the sailors held monster meetings of protest. A thousand sailors were arrested at Wilhelmshaven alone.

John W. Davis of West Virginia to be ambassador to Germany and plenipotentiary to Great Britain, vice Page, resigned.

Alexander C. King of Atlanta, Ga., to be solicitor-general, vice Davis, resigned.

To be surgeons, public health service—Robert Louis Allen, Ora Howard Cox, Marion Sunnari Lobard, Carl Michel, William Francis Tanner, William Charles Witt.

CREW ILL WITH GRIP, SHIP DRIFTS AT SEA

Drifting helpless at sea, her crew of forty all stricken with influenza and unable to navigate her, is the steamship Norambi, bound from London to an American port, according to Captain Rhinds of the British steamer City of Bombay, arriving here today. The wireless operator of the City of Bombay picked up an "S O S" call from the Norambi stating that the vessel was at the mercy of the sea and winds and her men unable to work. The location of the Norambi was not given, but Captain Rhinds believes she was in the vicinity of Bermuda. She is in command of Captain W. B. Budden.

DANCE FETE AND FROLIC TO AID CHRISTMAS BENEFIT

"It will be a humdinger!"

This was the comment of a well known Boston theatrical man when he was asked what he thought of the idea of the actor people of Boston holding a giant ball and frolic in Symphony Hall for the benefit of the Boston AMERICAN'S Christmas Basket Fund.

Other theatrical people, when the idea was suggested to them, agreed with the gentleman and in about fifteen minutes after the idea was first broached the plans were complete.

Don't forget either the date or the purpose.

Symphony Hall!

Wednesday evening, December 4!

Purpose: 1. To benefit the Boston AMERICAN Christmas Basket Fund. 2. To have a great and glorious celebration of the coming of peace.

For the first time in years at least, and perhaps for the first time in the history of the city, Boston people will have the opportunity to walk right up to and see at close range some of the best-known actors and actresses in the country who will be at the ball.

For they have all promised to come. And they'll be there.

Some of these gracious young ladies have also agreed to dance with some of the gallant Bostonians who they may meet at the ball.

Think of walking up with your best bow and asking the favor of the next waltz from Hazel Dawn or Peggy Wood.

Or how about the interesting experience of being introduced and listening to the language at close range of the "Baby Talk Lady" from "Seventeen"?

Another feature of this ball which is worth the price of admission, even in these hard put days, will be the presence at the ball of Miss Edith Day and Jack Dempsey, who will dance the "Tickle Toe" dance from "Going Up," which has tickled the toes of everybody who has seen it. They will be there, together with Frank Craven, Marion Sunshine, Edward Begley and all that bunch from the colonial who have been crowding the house in one of the musical comedy hits of the present decade.

Then there are the ladies and gentlemen from the "Passing Show of 1918," who are coming to the ball after Chu Chin Chow, and they'll be here according to their managers, who are already in town.

And Tavie Belge, the Belgian prima donna and the people from "Piddlers Three," which follows "Tiger Rose" at the Tremont, don't forget them. It's too bad Lenore Ulric can't come, but she will have left town.

"MAYTIME" STARS TO ATTEND.

More yet! There will be among those very much present, ladies and gentlemen, a whole flock of beauties from "Maytime," headed by Peggy Wood and some of the other principals of the cast, and last in this list, but by no means last in interest, there will be Potash and Perlmutter and several more.

Here then, is an all-star aggregation who are going to be free from makeup and who are going to mix in and have a good time, the like of which has probably never been gathered together in this city.

And they are all doing it for no other reason on earth than to help the poor widows and children of this city through the medium of the Boston AMERICAN'S Christmas Basket Fund.

For the price, ladies and gentlemen, is to be one round dollar for every person there.

And there will be no free list!

One dollar for everybody, two dollars per couple, is the price, and every dollar of it goes to relieve the suffering among the poor which exists in this town this year.

Calendar pad or in your hat and know it open.

Wednesday night, December 4, at Symphony Hall. All the big stars will be there singly and in constellations, and the person who stays away will be, next day, like the person who stayed away from downtown last Monday night.

He will not have been where the big doings were doing.

How about it, boys and girls? Send in your dimes and quarters and get the button which entitles you to an invitation to the big Christmas festival at the AMERICAN'S Christmas tree on the Common.

Why not adopt the suggestion of the Boston AMERICAN and send in your income for fifteen minutes to this fund? If everybody would do it the fund would go over the top. Unless someone gets busy and does it pretty soon the poor will have nothing much to eat this Christmas Day.

Learn of Son's Death as Welcoming Home of 5 Is Planned

With five sons in the service, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Henry of Dorchester rejoiced when the armistice was signed, and prepared a "welcome home' for their soldier boys. The entire house was to be renovated.

Today the family is plunged into mourning, with the news that Sergeant Andrew A. Henry, one of the sons, has died of wounds received in action on October 12. The parents, only yesterday busy with joyous plans, are prostrated with grief, and the house of rejoicing has become a house of sorrow.

Other sons in the service are: John F., quartermaster's department, Washington; Sergeant William A., ordnance department, Camp Hancock, Patrick, 76th Division, France, and James, Officers' Training Corps, Camp Lee, Va.

Sergeant Andrew A. Henry was with the 14th Machine Gun Company. He was born in Boston and was a graduate of the High School of Commerce.

BOSTON LABOR TO OPPOSE GENERAL CUT IN WAGES

The Boston Central Labor Union stands squarely behind Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in his declaration that labor will not tolerate any general reduction in wages or hours of labor. Corporation Counsel Alexander Whiteside, as a member of the committee on patriotic assimilation, presented ten commandments for the guidance of employers and employes during the reconstruction period. The union will attempt to defeat biennial elections by securing 25,000 signatures to petition under the I. and R. amendment by the first Wednesday of December. The union also went on record as favoring license and will urge its friends to vote "yes" at the election on December 17.

DOYLE, HARVARD MAN, IS JAILED IN LONDON

Eighteen months at hard labor was the sentence meted out in London to William E. Doyle, former Harvard man, convicted of "fleecing" Lieutenant Woolf Jost of the Royal Flying Corps out of $13,000 in a card game. Doyle is a son of the late William B. Doyle, florist, of Cambridge and Boston, whose former residence in Cambridge is now the site of the Cambridge Municipal Hospital.

MORE TEACHERS NEEDED FOR U.S. SCHOOLS

Federal Board Appeals to All Qualified to Aid in Education of Children

While the Boston School Committee is debarring married teachers from their former work in the public schools, the Federal Bureau of Education is issuing an appeal for more teachers, and especially of women "whose husbands are now in the army or in other branches of the government service, or whose homes do not demand all their time."

"Such women," runs the appeal, sent out by P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, "are specially needed in the schools now."

In view of the great shortage of teachers for public schools the government has taken a hand and established a School Board Service Division of the Bureau of Education at Washington for the purpose of bringing teachers and positions together. The new branch is a kind of employment agency, serving without charge to either teacher or schools. All who are qualified to teach, including those who can give only part time, are urged to register with the School Board Service Division.

The scientific and manual training departments especially have suffered. It is pointed out, on account of the departure of teachers for positions in the government service, and the Bureau of Education suggests that physicians, pharmacists and mechanics who could give part time to this work volunteer their experience to help out in the emergency. Many such men, the bureau believes, would make excellent teachers.

"Fifty thousand teachers' places are vacant," runs the statement of the commissioner, "and 126,000 persons are teaching this year who never before taught a class. Two thousand schools have actually closed or have remained unopened because it was impossible for the local trustees to find teachers for them. The lowered standard in many places and the total lack of instruction in others means a loss to the children of the nation which cannot be replaced.

"The shortage of teachers affects nearly every State in the Union. Many urgent requests have been made for the assistance of the United States Bureau of Education, for it is clearly impossible for some of the States to man their schools with the teachers available in their own borders. Practical and effective response will be made by the bureau."

PLANS NON-STOP FLIGHT TO NORTH POLE AND ASIA

New York, Nov. 18.—A 1,400-mile non-stop airplane flight, with the North Pole as one of the principal points of interest, is planned for next July by Captain Robert A. Bartlett, he announced here today.

The proposed flight will start from Etah, Greenland, and passing right over the pole without the slightest hesitation, will continue on to Cape Cholukin, Asia. As a safeguard against a forced landing Captain Bartlett announces the plane will carry a dog team of ten huskies, a sledge, a month's provisions for dogs and men, and guns.

BULK OF FORMER KAISER'S MONEY IN AMERICA

London, Nov. 18.—Count Wilhelm Hohenzollern is now nearly penniless except for considerable property in the United States and Canada, held in another person's name, the Daily Express is informed by its Amsterdam correspondent.

The ex-Kaiser's 152 palaces, chateaus and shooting boxes in Germany, having been bought with the German people's money, probably will be returned to the nation by the German Socialist rebels now in complete control at Berlin and in every other city and town of any importance in Germany.

The former Emperor was one of the wealthiest men in Germany, but his fortune has been considerably diminished during the war. His vast number of shares in the German shipping concerns are now practically worthless.

It was recalled today that William II. always insisted upon his sons marrying wealthy women, possibly with a view to a day of reckoning which he may have foreseen.

Prince Eitel Fritz's wife, nee Grand Duchess of Oldenburg, and August Wilhelm's spouse, the former Princess of Sonderberg-Glueksburg, are among the wealthiest princesses in Europe. If their husbands are unable to repeat their father-in-law's "stunt," they will be "out of luck," as they say in sporting circles.

The other German kings and princes are in no better fix. Sovereigns are falling like rotten apples; a slight shake of the tree and Germany will soon be rid of all of them.

The will of Arthur D. Hayes of Pepperell, who died September 22, has been filed. It is dated July 30, 1918, and names his wife, Mrs. Martha W. Hayes, of Pepperell, as executrix. The estate is valued at $43,000; $8,000 in real estate and $35,000 in personal property.

STATE-WIDE CELEBRATION PLANNED FOR THE RETURNING 26TH

ALL EAGER TO HONOR TROOPS

Mayors and Heads of Town Governments Enthusiastic Over Idea

When vigorous, enthusiastic responses began to flow back to the AMERICAN office.

BOSTON FIRST TO RESPOND.

Quincy—as befitting the "City of American Presidents"—crossed the line first. Mayor Joseph L. Whiton having filed his reply within a few seconds after receiving the AMERICAN message. Apparently he did not have to hesitate a second to think it over.

"The city has under consideration a proper celebration when the boys come home that will show them that we appreciate patriotic devotion to not only our city, but to the entire country," said Mayor Whiton.

That message speaks for itself. Enthusiasm is written in every letter of it.

In many of the cities and towns committees have already been formed to arrange the details of the celebration. Several executives replied that they were still without a hint as to when the division will return, but that their respective places are literally "on the firing line" waiting for definite news with every possible preparation made.

ATTLEBORO READY.

"Home coming may not occur in my administration," wires Mayor Harold E. Sweet of Attleboro, "but Attleboro will certainly arrange a welcome that will be in keeping with the whole-souled response to all war obligations. Parade, banquet, and public reception at local armory among probable features. Committee already available for prompt and complete arrangements."

Mayor James H. Kay of Fall River says: "Have made no plans yet, but will give the boys a rousing reception when they return."

Mayor R. K. Willard, of Chelsea, says: "Made no definite plans as yet. Our entire population will give them a fine reception upon their return. We are only waiting to be informed of date of arrival."

These and many similar messages plainly show the feelings of the Commonwealth's citizens. The homecoming of the 26th Division will be no less a historical event than the departure of the division for service abroad. And it will be a far happier one for the men, women and children of Massachusetts.

In years gone by chronicles of war laid hardly less stress on the receptions received by the victorious troops than on the greatest battles. The pages of Roman history contain almost as much about the triumphal homecomings of the Cæsars as about their battles. In years to come Massachusetts' reception to her Twentieth Century crusaders will be will large on history's page. And there is every indication that the celebration will be worthy both of the boys of the 26th and of a place in history.

WORCESTER ENTHUSIASTIC.

Pittsburg's Mayor wires that that city has made no plans as yet, and much the same story is reported by John D. Kelly, chairman of selectmen of Greenfield. The latter adds that the boys will be given a grand reception when they arrive.

Mayor Leslie K. Morse of Haverhill wires that a committee has already been selected to make arrangements for the reception of the boys and guarantees that they will be given a greater reception than ever accorded anybody in the city of Haverhill.

Hudson and Clinton both report that plans for the welcome are not completed.

Mayor Pehr G. Holmes of Worcester says that while no definite plans have been made, "I can assure you when the proper time comes Worcester will give its boys a celebration that will be remembered in the many years to come. We are all anticipating that day and we all feel that nothing will be too big to show the boys the real appreciation that Worcester feels for their many sacrifices."

Mayor John J. Hurley of Lawrence: "We will give the soldier boys a royal reception when they arrive in Lawrence. Everybody is interested to hear the good news."

BANQUET AT PEABODY.

W. J. Lamoureaux says that Southbridge plans to give its boys a fitting and most royal reception and keep up its reputation as doing as well if not better than other towns of its size.

Middleboro says that the town will hold a public reception for its men of the 101st when they return, and that plans for this reception will be made in whatever time is allowed.

Mayor Henry Sawtelle of Leominster gives assurance that though plans for the welcome to the returning boys is not completed, the city will give them a hearty welcome and have a patriotic demonstration.

Arrangements have not been made in Plymouth, as yet for a celebration. In Chatham the report is much the same, with a promise that a generous welcome will be accorded them.

S. Howard Bennett, Mayor of Peabody, says a fact that city will give the boys a public banquet and declare a general holiday. There will be band concerts and parades, with open house in all clubs and residences, and if there is any new form of noise or entertainment yet unheard of that will be adopted also.

Harvey O. Winch, chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Templeton, promises that the day the boys return will be the biggest that the old town has ever seen, although full details of the celebration are not complete. William Bray says that Georgetown will celebrate fittingly, but that best demonstrations are made on impulse."

Wilbraham has appointed a "live committee," according to a statement from F. A. Warren, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, and consequently a live celebration is expected there.

SPENCER TO BE WIDE OPEN.

Charles A. Lovell, chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Spencer, says: "We are planning for the greatest patriotic demonstration in the history of the town, so that it may bring assurance to our boys of the heartfelt appreciation of their own home town for the service they have rendered to their country and us."

Millbury joins in the promise of the other towns to give the boys the greatest reception any body of men ever received on their return to that town.

More than 8 per cent. of the total population of Billerica is in the service, according to the statement of Thomas F. Sheridan, and the returning soldiers are promised the biggest reception in the history of the town, when they return home.

In Orange, no arrangements have been made, but proper observance will be made, is the promise. In Braintree the report is the same and Hopkinton reports that though a committee has been appointed, plans are not formulated. Winthrop, too, promises to celebrate in a fashion worthy of the town, but its plans are still to be completed. In Orleans plans have not yet been made.

E. C. Caswell, for the board of selectmen of Lunenburg, promises that Lunenburg will meet the boys at the "town gate" and try to show them that their work has been appreciated.

A "public demonstration that will make the town howl" is the promise of the town of Bedford, through I. Pfeiffer, chairman of the board of selectmen. The Bedford Public Safety Committee is co-operating with the townspeople in plans for the welcome that is guaranteed to completely take the lid off the town.

MARBLEHEAD BUSY ALREADY.

Marblehead has already appointed a committee which includes John F. Williams as chairman, with nine prominent citizens and delegates of all fraternal and social organizations. The welcome to the returning soldiers is in their hands, and the plans are still incomplete.

Provincetown, with a big celebration on its program for Thursday, has not yet made plans for the welcome to its returning soldier boys. On Thursday, the town will celebrate two of the greatest events in the history of the country—the signing of the immortal compact in the harbor on November 11, 1620, and the signing of the armistice on November 11, 1918.

The celebration is to take the form of a permanent peace offering, by the founding of a free hospital. It is expected that the day will be celebrated annually.

Bridgewater has plans under way for a welcome home celebration and a meeting will be held early this week for completing them. Groton has plans for a celebration under way, but as yet incomplete. Assurance is given that it will be "worthy of the occasion."

Henry L. Baldwin of the Board of Selectmen of Swampscott says, "Swampscott is ready and eager to welcome home with outstretched arms her victorious sons. They will receive civic honor within the power of our people. Nothing we can do can repay their valor and sacrifice on the battle-scarred fields of France. A mass meeting will be called to make definite plans for their reception."

Walter B. Hopkinson, Mayor of Newburyport, says: "We are proud of our brave boys who have assisted in saving the civilization of the world. It is impossible to state at the moment just how we shall celebrate their homecoming, but we will surely show our appreciation in no uncertain way."

Town Clerk James H. Fleming of Needham believes that the celebration for the boys will be the finest ever. Plans are already under way for making this the biggest event in Needham's history. The town clerk didn't forget, either, to pay his respects to the Boston AMERICAN for its efforts to concentrate the plans of all the cities and towns into a celebration that will shake the old Bay State to its very foundations.

BRIGHTON AND BROOKLINE 'SMILES' WEDNESDAY

Wednesday at 2 p. m. the residents of Brighton, Allston and Brookline will have a long-awaited opportunity to send their "Smiles Across the Sea" to the soldier lads just out of the trenches.

Allston Playground is the appointed place, and it is needless to say that it will be crowded. Laughing and smiling wives, mothers, sweethearts and children will take advantage of this opportunity offered by the Boston AMERICAN to show themselves on the screen to the loved ones over there.

This is the tenth and second last instalment of "Smiles Across the Sea," and will be the only chance for relatives and friends of the soldier lads from the Brighton, Allston and Brookline sections to be filmed in this wonderful aerial.

So, all up and get ready and wear your best smile, for the camera man will get you just as you are on Wednesday at the Allston Playground, Allston street and Griggs place.

The "smiles" stage will be set for the last time on Saturday next at the Roslindale Playground, Washington street, Roslindale, for the soldiers' relatives of Jamaica Plain, Hyde Park, Roslindale and West Roxbury. This film will end the series and in a short time smiling Boston, realistic and lifelike, flashed on the screen, will gladden the boys far from home.

In the event of rain on either Wednesday or Saturday next, the groups will be filmed on the following day.

CHURCH MEN DISCUSS INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS

Industrial problems were discussed at the fifteenth annual meeting of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches, held today in the Central Congregational Church, Chelsea. Professor Clarence R. Skinner showed the duty of the churches toward this subject. "Comity Between Churches" was presented by Rev. Charles F. Rice of Boston; "Evangelism," by Rev. Dr. W. W. Iliffe of the Presbyterian Church, and "Religious Education" by Professor Norman E. Richardson, of Boston University. "Education and the Present Crisis" was defined by Commissioner of Education Payson Smith.

DORCHESTER TO SEND 'SMILES' TOMORROW

Rain Postpones Filming at Franklin Field Scheduled for Sunday

The filming of "Smiles Across the Sea" of the residents of Dorchester, Ashmont, Neponset and Mattapan, scheduled for yesterday at Franklin Field, was postponed at the last minute, owing to the rain and the soggy condition of the field.

Instead, over 2,000 feet of film will be taken of the relatives of the boys "over there" from those districts at two o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Franklin Field.

The film, which will be reproduced to cheer the boys in the camps "over there" on Christmas Day will be shown in France under the auspices of the United States Committee of Public Information.

The tenth instalment of "smiles" will be filmed at Allston Playground, Allston street, Allston, on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will include all soldiers' relatives residing in Allston, Brighton and Brookline.

The eleventh, and final chapter in the present series of films, will be taken next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Washington Street Playground, Roslindale, and will include all soldiers' relatives residing in Jamaica Plain, Forest Hills, Roslindale, West Roxbury and Hyde Park.

The impending home-coming of so many American boys in France makes it inadvisable to film further instalments of "smiles" after Saturday.

The Blackburn Products Co.

Dear Sirs—As I was mixing some more of the Menthol-Laxene in syrup this morning I could not help but wonder if you really know what a wonderful cold remedy it is, even if you do put it up.

Last fall we were really worried about my husband, as he had tried so many remedies, and the doctor did not seem to help him at all, when one day he happened to read an ad of your Menthol-Laxene and he said, "I will give it a trial, then give it up, as nothing else doesn't help me." Well, I believe it! He began to feel easier right away, and long before the bottle was gone he was all over his terrible cough, and by taking a little we both feeling tonic just a little we both have warded off every bit of colds and coughs since, until Monday of this week in got his feet so wet and by night he coughed again quite badly, but this morning he was o. k. again.

This is 7:00 p. m., so you see how quickly it worked.

We have gotten over so many others to use it by giving them a sample of ours.

This is just a line to tell you how grateful we are to you and your remedy.

Yours truly,

Rupture Kills 7,000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are said away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The Plapao Method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture (hernia) that has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD, when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore, cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used while you work and while you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., Block 292, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the last instructive information necessary.—Advertisement.

GEN. M'ARTHUR IS CITED AGAIN FOR HEROISM

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Brigadier-General Douglas MacArthur, former Washington press censor, has been cited again for heroism in the face of fire, in addition to the French War Cross given him while serving as chief of staff for the Rainbow Division, the Distinguished Service Cross of the United States army, decorated with a bronze oak leaf as an indication that he won the coveted decoration a second time.

Incidentally, according to a personal letter reaching here today, General MacArthur has been wounded again, although he since has fully recovered and is back leading the 84th brigade of the 42nd division into Germany toward the Rhine.

MacArthur received his latest citation for gallantry in leading his brigade at the taking of the Cote de Chatillion and hills No. 288 and 242. The first account of this operation of the world famed Rainbow Division as received here says:

UNDER RAIN OF FIRE.

"The Cote de Chatillion is 820 feet high. The Americans on October 16 attempted its capture. They found the Germans had constructed a machine gun fortress on the heights, and every minute of forty hours spent there the troops were exposed to a merciless rain of lead from all sides.

"Slowly the Americans crawling on their stomachs, faced a massed fire of machine guns and rifles which was accompanied by shrapnel and hand grenades.

"The Americans turned mortars on the Germans. Several of the enemy surrendered. Then the fight was on. Yard after yard the Americans gained. At last the greater part of the slopes were gained. One came the bayonet, and, with a wild hurrah the Americans fell upon the enemy. It was a glorious victory."

COMMANDED FOR BRAVERY.

The words of Commander-in-Chief Pershing, in awarding the new decoration to General MacArthur as announced by the War Department today are as follows:

"For the following act of extraordinary heroism in action, Brigadier-General MacArthur is awarded a bronze oak leaf to be worn on the Distinguished Service Cross awarded him March 20, 1918.

"Brigadier Commander General MacArthur personally led his men and by the skillful manoeuvring of his brigade made possible the capture of Hills No. 288, 242 and the Cote De Chatillion, October 14, 15 and 16, 1918. He displayed indomitable resolution and great courage in rallying broken lines and in reforming attacks, thereby, making victory possible.

"On a field where courage was the rule his courage was the dominant feature."

General MacArthur is the son of the late General Arthur MacArthur and his mother, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, is now living in Santa Barbara, Cal.

TALK OF ICY N. E. ALL 'BUNK,' SAYS BILLY SUNDAY

Evangelist on a Three-Hour Whirlwind Visit Here; Sails for France March 1

Billy Sunday paid Boston a flying visit today. He left Providence on the 9:10 train, and little more than three hours later had said farewell to Boston and was on a train for Indiana.

"On March 1 I will sail for France," he said as he boarded the westbound train. "I have been repeatedly asked to go there to preach, but up to this time have believed that my efforts were more needed here at home. Now, however, I believe that our boys abroad need all the spiritual aid they can get and I'm going over to give it to them. I will go under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A.

"This here talk about New England people being cold is all bunk. That's what they told me out West. You'd think New England folks could as ice, but I didn't. I found 'em warm and responsive, eager for the gospel of God. And I'm mighty sorry to leave this section. The weeks I have spent in Boston and Providence will always be a pleasant memory. I hate to go, but I've got to. I go next to Fort Worth, Tex., for six weeks, and from there to Richmond, Va., for six weeks. Then I sail for France."

Billy was met on his arrival at the South Station by representatives of the Y. M. C. A., who escorted him to the Charlestown Navy Yard, where he was warmly greeted by Commandant and Rush. His trip through Boston was a triumphant one, hundreds of Bostonians greeting him as his cab rolled through the streets. At one point a traffic officer rushed over and stopped the cab to shake hands with him.

He was taken aboard the Mount Vernon, formerly the German liner Kronprinzessin Cecile, and was shown through the Kaiser's suite.

"Well, that crippled, devilish beast will never sleep in that bed again," he exclaimed, referring to his imperial ruler, the late Kaiser.

Later on the deck of the ship he talked to the young sailors who man her and then led them in prayer. Then he was whirled back to the station to entrain for the West.

The other inspectors appointed for special work are Edward A. Campana, Paul C. Disaro, Joseph M. Harrington, John McGlinchey and Frank H. Spear.

FRAMINGHAM NAVAL MEN HOUSED AT PIER

All the navy men formerly at Camp John M. Edgar, Framingham, are now under shelter at the receiving ship annex, Commonwealth Pier, South Boston. There are about 2,500 men. The army store house with its four floors, has been fitted up for accommodations.

WILLIS' ESCAPE DESCRIBED BY CHUM

Lieutenant Who Quit German Camp With Boston Aviator Tells How They Got Away

Additional details of the escape of Lieutenant Harold B. Willis of Boston, an American aviator, from a German prison camp at Villingen were given by Lieutenant E. V. Isaacs of the U. S. S. President Lincoln, who has arrived in London after five months' imprisonment. Lieutenant Isaacs' home is in Cresco, Ia. Willis is one of the original members of the Lafayette Escadrille.

How the two broke from a heavily guarded camp; how they traveled for eight days through the Black Forest, hiding by day and making their captious way by night; how they swam the Rhine, struggling with the swift current until strength was exhausted; how they finally landed on friendly Swiss soil, nearly dead from exhaustion, makes one of the most thrilling stories of adventure that has come out of the great war.

Lieutenants Willis and Isaacs were members of a party of sixteen that planned to escape from the camp in groups of four each.

MADE BRIDGE OF LATHS.

The windows to their rooms were barred; a ditch eight feet deep, with barbed wire at the bottom and a barbed wire fence on the outside surrounded the building. A few feet beyond the ditch was another wire fence, eight to ten feet high, the upper strands curving inward; sentries stood at every thirty yards, and two in the prison yard.

Isaacs had contrived a bridge of two laths taken from the tennis court, across which his party made their way from their windows "over the top" of the barbed fence.

Willis' party made a more strategic plan. Instead of digging their way out, they "dug in" to the yard where the guard was stationed, figuring that when the alarm was given they would rush out with the guard. This Willis succeeded in doing, although the first sight of his comrades. He had contrived a crude uniform following the lines of those worn by the Germans, but was soon spotted, and was obliged to make his way up a precipitous hill directly in front of the camp. He was so laden with equipment that he could not run, and was shot at from the rear by Prussian guards. In spite of these hazards, he succeeded in getting away.

LONG, HARD SWIM.

He fell in with Isaacs, who had run for two miles, and the two fared together for eight days until they came to the Rhine. They had many narrow escapes from sentries, and when they reached the Rhine were nearly exhausted.

In order to escape the sentries they waded for a long distance in the icy water of a little tributary, and at last came to the big river about 2 a. m.

"It was a tough swim," said Isaacs, "and there was a fog, which made it dangerous. Wright I got in the middle I thought I was exhausted. Then all of a sudden I was out of the current and made my way better.

"The shore seemed miles away, and when I was only fifteen or twenty metres away I had to give up altogether. I turned on my back and must have swum unconsciously, for in a minute or two I struck bottom."

He was given shelter by a Swiss customs official. Isaacs and Willis had become separated in their swim, but sent to search for each other, and it developed that Willis had landed about two or three kilometres away.

Isaacs has just reached England, but Willis went to Paris some time ago, and reported for duty once more. Willis is a graduate of Harvard, 1912. He enlisted first with the American ambulance service, and later had a war cross for bravery. Later he joined the Lafayette Escadrille, and was captured at Verdun in August, 1917.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Turkish Hatred of Englishmen.

Technically, of course, I had no right to interfere. According to the cold-blooded legalities of the situation, the Turkish government was purely a domestic affair; unless it directly affected American lives and American interests, it was outside the concern of the American government.

When I first approached Talaat on the subject, he called my attention to this fact in no uncertain terms.

"The man is an English agent," he replied, "and we have the evidence for it."

I began to talk about the Armenians at Konia. I had hardly started when Talaat's attitude became even more belligerent. His eyes lighted up, he brought his jaws together, leaned over toward me, and snapped out:

"Are they Americans?"

My explanations of this question were hardly diplomatic; it was merely a way of telling me that the matter was none of my business. In a moment Talaat said this in so many words.

"The Armenians are not to be trusted," he said; "besides, what we do with them does not concern the United States."

HATRED FOR ENGLISHMEN.

I replied that I regarded myself as the friend of the Armenians and was shocked at the way that they were being treated. But he shook his head and refused to discuss the matter. I saw that nothing could be gained by forcing the issue at that time. I spoke in behalf of another British subject who was not being treated properly.

"He's English, isn't he?" answered Talaat. "Then I shall do as I like with him!"

"Eat him, if you wish!" I replied.

"Ah," said Talaat, "he would go against my digestion."

He was altogether in a reckless mood. "Gott strafe England!" he shouted—using one of the few German phrases that he knew. "As to your Armenians, we don't give a rap for the future! We live only in the present!"

Certainly this interview was not an encouraging beginning, so far as the Armenians were concerned. But Talaat was not always in this mood.

He went from one emotion to another as lightly as a child; I would find him here and unyielding one day, and uproariously good-natured and accommodating the next. Prudence dictated, therefore, that I should await one of his more congenial moments before approaching him on the subject that aroused all the barbarity in his nature. Such an opportunity soon presented itself. One day, soon after the interview chronicled above, I called on Talaat again. The first thing he did was to open his desk and pull out a handful of yellow cablegrams.

AMBASSADOR'S MAIL PILFERED.

"Why don't you give this money to us," he said, with a grin.

"What money?" I asked.

"Here is a cablegram for you from America, sending you a lot of money for the Armenians. You ought not to use it that way; give it to us Turks, we need it as badly as they do."

"I have not received any such cablegram," I replied.

"Oh, no, but you will," he answered. "I always get all your cablegrams first, you know. After I have finished reading them I send them around to you."

This statement was the literal truth. Every morning all the open cablegrams in Constantinople were forwarded to Talaat, who read them, before consenting to their being forwarded to their destination. Even the cablegrams of the ambassadors were apparently not exempt, though, of course, the ciphered messages were not interfered with. Ordinarily I might have protested against this infringement of my rights, but Talaat's engaging frankness in pilfering my correspondence and in even waving my own cablegrams in my face gave me an excellent opening to introduce the forbidden subject.

But on this occasion, as on many others, Talaat was evasive and noncommittal and showed much hostility to the interest which the American people were manifesting in the Armenians. He explained his policy as the ground that the Armenians were in constant correspondence with the Russians. The definite conviction which these conversations left upon my mind was that Talaat was the most implacable enemy of this persecuted race.

TO CRUSH ARMENIA.

"He gave me the impression," such is the entry which I find in my diary on August 3rd, "that Talaat is the one who desires to crush the poor Armenians." He told me that the Union and Progress Committee had carefully considered the matter in all its details and that the policy which was being pursued was that which they had officially adopted. He said that I must not get the idea that the deportations had been decided upon hastily; in reality they were the result of prolonged and careful deliberation. To my repeated appeals that he should show mercy to these people, he sometimes responded seriously, sometimes angrily, and sometimes flippantly.

"Some day," he once said, "I will come and discuss the whole Armenian subject with you," and then he added in a low tone in Turkish:

"But that day will never come!"

"Why are you so interested in the Armenians anyway?" he said, on another occasion. "You are a Jew; these people are Christians. The Mohammedans and the Jews always get on harmoniously. We are treating the Jews here all right. What have you to complain of? Why can't you let us do with these Christians as we please?"

I had always remarked that the Turks look upon practically every question as a personal matter, yet this point of view rather stunned me. However, it was a complete revelation of Turkish mentality; the fact that, above all considerations of race and religion, there are such things as humanity and civilization never for a moment enters their mind. They can understand a Christian fighting for a Christian and a Jew fighting for a Jew, but such abstractions as justice and decency form no part of their conception of things.

DIDN'T REPRESENT JEWRY.

"You don't seem to realize," I replied, "that I am not here as a Jew, but as American Ambassador. My country contains something more than 97,000,000 Christians and something less than 3,000,000 Jews. So, at least in my ambassadorial capacity, I am 97 per cent. Christian. But after all that is not the point. I do not appeal to you in the name of any race or religion, but merely as a human being. You have told me many times that you want to make Turkey a part of the modern progressive world. The way you are treating the Armenians will not help you to realize that ambition; it puts you in the class of backward, reactionary peoples."

"We treat the Americans all right, too," said Talaat. "I don't see why you should complain."

"But Americans are outraged by your persecutions of the Armenians," I replied. "You must base your principles on humanitarianism, not racial discrimination, or the United States will not regard you as a friend and an equal. And you should understand the great changes that are taking place among Christians all over the world. They are forgetting their differences and all sects are coming together as one. You look down on American missionaries, but don't forget that it is the best element in America that supports their work, especially their educational institutions."

Strangely enough, these remarks did not offend Talaat, but they did not shake his determination. I might as well have been talking to a stone wall. From my abstractions he immediately came down to something definite.

"These people," he said, "refused to disarm, when we asked them to. They opposed us at Van and at Zeitoun, and they helped the Russians. There is only one way in which we can defend ourselves against them in the future, and that is just to deport them."

I had many talks with Talaat on the Armenians, but I never succeeded in moving him to the slightest degree.

Talaat's attitude toward the Armenians was summed up in the proud boast which he made to his friends: "I have accomplished more toward solving the Armenian problem in three months than Abdul Hamid accomplished in thirty years!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

ENVER PASHA DISCUSSES THE ARMENIANS.

All this time I was bringing pressure upon Enver also. The Minister of War, as I have already indicated, was a different type of man from Talaat. He concealed his real feelings much more successfully; he was usually suave, cold-blooded and scrupulously polite. And at first he was by no means so callous as Talaat in discussing the Armenians.

He dismissed the early stories as wild exaggerations, declared that the troubles at Van were merely ordinary warfare and attempted to quiet my fears that the wholesale annihilation of the Armenians had been decided on. Yet all the time that Enver was attempting to deceive me, he was making open admissions to other people—a fact of which I was aware. In particular he made no attempt to conceal the real situation from Dr. Lepsius, a representative of German missionary interests.

Dr. Lepsius was a high-minded Christian gentleman. He had been all through the Armenian massacres of 1895, and he had raised considerable sums of money to build orphanages for Armenian children who had lost their parents at that time. He came again in 1915 to investigate the Armenian situation in behalf of German missionary interests.

He asked for the privilege of inspecting the reports of American consuls and I granted it. These documents, supplemented by other information which Dr. Lepsius obtained, largely from German missionaries in the interior, left no doubt in his mind as to the policy of the Turks.

GERMANS REVEALED MASSACRE.

His feelings were arouse chiefly against his own government. He expressed to me the humiliation which he felt, as a German, that the Turks should deliberately set about to exterminate their Christian subjects, ostensibly a Christian country, was making no endeavors to prevent it. To him Enver scarcely concealed the official purpose. Dr. Lepsius was simply staggered by his frankness, for Enver told him in so many words that they at last had an opportunity to rid themselves of the Armenians and that they proposed to use it.

In a talk with Enver I began by suggesting that the central government was probably not to blame for the massacres. I thought that this would not be displeasing to him.

"Of course I know that the cabinet would never order such terrible things as have taken place," I said, "but the Young Turk Committee can hardly be held responsible. Undoubtedly your subordinates have gone much further than you have ever intended. I realize that it is not always easy to control your underlings."

Enver straightened up at once. I saw that my remarks so far from smoothing the way to a quiet and friendly discussion, had greatly offended him.

"You and Talaat and the rest of the Committee can hardly be held responsible. Undoubtedly your subordinates have gone much further than you have ever intended. I realize that it is not always easy to control your underlings."

Enver straightened up at once. I saw that my remarks so far from smoothing the way to a quiet and friendly discussion, had greatly offended him.

"You are greatly mistaken," he said. "We have this country absolutely under our control. I have no desire to shift the blame on our underlings and I am entirely willing to accept the responsibility myself for every everything that has taken place. The Cabinet itself has ordered the deportations. I am convinced that we are completely justified in doing this owing to the hostile attitude of the Armenians toward the Ottoman government, but we are the real rulers of Turkey and no underling would dare proceed in a matter of this kind without our orders."

Enver tried to mitigate the barbarity of his general attitude by showing mercy in particular instances. I made no progress in my efforts to stop the program of wholesale massacre, but I did save a few Armenians from death. One day I received word from the American consul at Smyrna that seven Armenians had been sentenced to be hanged. These men had been accused of committing some rather vague political offence in 1909, yet neither Rahmi Bey, the Governor-General of Smyrna, nor the military commander believed that they were guilty. When the order for execution reached Smyrna these authorities wired Constantinople that under the Ottoman law the accused had the right to appeal for clemency to the Sultan. The answer which was returned to this communication well illustrated the extent to which the rights of the Armenians were regarded at that time.

"Technically your are right; hang them first and send the petition for pardon afterward."

I visited Enver in the interest of these men on Bairam, which is the greatest Mohammedan religious festival; it is the day that succeeds Ramazan, their month of fasting. Bairam has one feature in common with Christmas, for on that day it is customary for Mohammedans to exchange small presents, usually sweets. So after the usual remarks of felicitation I said to Enver:

"Today is Bairam and you haven't given me any present yet."

15 LIVES AS A "PRESENT."

Enver laughed.

"What do you want? Shall I send you a box of candies?"

"Oh, no," I answered, "I am not so cheap as that. I want the pardon of the seven Armenians who had been condemned at Smyrna."

The proposition apparently struck Enver as very amusing.

"That's a funny way of asking for a pardon," he said. "However, since you put it that way, I can't refuse."

He immediately sent for his aide and telegraphed to Smyrna, setting the men free.

Thus fortuitously is justice administered and decision involving human lives made in Turkey. Nothing could make clearer the slight estimation in which the Turks hold life and the slight extent to which principle controls their conduct. Enver spared these men not because he had the slightest interest in their cases, but simply as a personal favor to me and largely because of the whimsical manner in which I had asked it. In all my talks on the Armenians the Minister of War treated the whole matter more or less casually; he could discuss the fate of a race in a parenthesis, and refer to the massacre of children as nonchalantly as we would speak of the weather.

I have already said that Said Halim, the Grand Vizier, was not an influential personage. Nominally his office was the most important in the empire; actually the Grand Vizier was a mere place warmer, and Talaat and Enver controlled the personal incumbent, precisely as they controlled the Sultan himself. Technically the ambassadors should have conducted their negotiations with Said Halim, for he was Minister of Foreign Affairs; I early discovered, however, that nothing could be accomplished in this way, and, though I still made my Monday calls as a matter of courtesy, I preferred to deal directly with the men who had the real power to decide all matters.

RADIO IS EAGER FOR RETURN GO WITH DEVENS

Dot and Dash Men Feel Confident of Win if Given Another Chance

U. S. Naval Radio School, Cambridge, Nov. 18.—Following defeat of the Radio eleven at the hands of Camp Devens, the Radio boys settled down today to devising ways and means of retrieving their lost laurels.

Hope was expressed that a return game would be arranged between the two teams, and in the event the match is brought about, Radio feels that its eleven will give a much better account of itself.

There were no excuses made by Radio enthusiasts today. The defeat was accepted as defeat, and defeat only, and there was a conspicuous absence on the part of all Radio students and boosters to make excuses for the Radio eleven. They hope to see the return match even up matters with the Army eleven.

Tonight the talk of football will be shifted to the instruction Hall moving picture entertainment, several of which are planned for the entertainment of the students this week.

The moving picture exhibitions are held under the auspices of the "Osciliator," the Radio official organ, and have been pronounced a success in every respect by all who have attended them.

Oxford Boy Dies of Wounds

Says U. S. Boys Will Be Needed Abroad Two Years More

Chicago, Nov. 18.—American soldiers will be needed in Europe for a year and a half or two years after peace has been signed, according to Captain Robert E. Lee, grandson of the noted Confederate general, who has just returned from the front.

Captain Lee said there is a vast amount of police and reconstruction work that must be done by American soldiers.

"We will have to restore order in Russia," he said, "and prevent the spread of Bolshevism in other countries whose governments have been whipped by the allies. It is our duty as a Christian nation not to abandon to forces of disorder the peoples we have conquered."

DEVENS TROOPS URGED TO KEEP UP INTEREST

Told It May Be Some Time Before They Are Mustered Out of Army

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, Nov. 18.—To allay the feeling of unrest among the soldiers of this cantonment over the pending peace negotiations an order, was issued today directing them not to divulge from their military duties and to continue the interest they manifested in the various drills prior to the signing of the armistice.

"The signing of the armistice has naturally resulted in a certain feeling of unrest among the troops of this and other cantonments," says the order. "Some assume that their return to civil life is imminent, and their interest in military matters correspondingly wanes.

"The President wrote on November 8, 'No matter how distant the day of peace may be, it will be followed by a long period of demobilization.'" This information has, in a great way, appeased the minds of many of the soldiers, but others are still wondering how long they will be held here. Company commanders are just as anxious as the privates. The men of the Depot Brigade feel that they will be mustered out shortly, while those of the Plymouth Division seem to think they will be sent to Russia or France for police duty.

Lawrence F. Sampson of Middleboro, who gave up a good business in Boston to act as secretary for the Knights of Columbus, today completed a year's service in this cantonment.

There will be a boxing tournament this evening at the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A., in which many of the camp hitters will try conclusions with rival followers of fistiana. Six fast bouts are promised by the athletic officers. A fee of 15 cents will be exacted of each spectator for admission. This money, it is stated, pays the expenses of the tournament.

Arrangements are being made for a game between the camp football eleven and a team from the Newport Training Station. A game in which the camp team will figure is expected to be held in Lynn or Beverly November 30.

The camp boxing team is slated to appear at the Salem Armory on November 26 and at Haverhill on November 28. At the latter place a battle royal will be a feature. Young Dasis is scheduled to wrestle Private John Dopolous of the 28th Company there that night.

An insurance manual was issued today, the intent of which is to serve as a ready reference to the provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act.

All basketball teams throughout the State are invited by the athletic officers to arrange for games with the camp team.

BOSTON PROMISES TO PASS $5,000,000 IN WAR DRIVE

tion needed but $500,000 to make this an actuality. Boston has accomplished wonders in the past 24 hours, and was apparently headed toward a great oversubscription.

Contributions poured in so fast this morning that it was impossible to arrive at any given figure. The collections taken up in the churches yesterday helped swell the totals greatly.

BIG SUCCESS IN WARDS.

Ward committees reported great success in their house-to-house canvass yesterday. By midnight tonight it seemed certain that everybody in Greater Boston would have given something to keep the city from falling down in this greatest free will offering in history.

Malden sent in word early that her quota had been oversubscribed by 66 per cent, with the magnificent total of $83,500. Other cities and towns throughout the district told the same story.

"We are going to oversubscribe our allotments as sure as can be, if this grand eleventh hour spurt continues up to the closing hour tonight," said Frank W. Renick, chairman of the Boston district.

Chairman Charles F. Weed of the Massachusetts organization issued the following statement:

LET ALL DO THEIR DUTY.

"Let every citizen of Massachusetts rise to his duty today. If he has not contributed his share to this magnificent cause, now is his last chance to do it. The campaign time will not be extended one minute after midnight.

"Where is the man or woman whose heart does not thrill over the exploits of our American soldiers in this greatest war of all time? Show your appreciation in this great eleventh hour by contributing your offering of thanksgiving. The boys have indeed earned the little comforts that your money will bring, and besides giving you will realize more than ever before what a splendid investment in American manhood it is. It is a grand opportunity and one that will bring a great joy to you if you but accept it."

NEW ENGLAND FIGURES.

The New England situation lines up as follows, with a greater portion of today's contributions to be heard from:

	Amount raised.	Maximum quota.
Massachusetts	$7,372,392	$13,572,852
Connecticut	3,007,774	3,591,100
Rhode Island	1,392,877	1,835,491
Maine	1,200,000	1,359,491
N. Hampshire	775,000	1,055,356
Vermont	500,000	707,551
	$14,798,045	$22,250,342

An appeal to Harvard College to come to the support of the drive was issued today by the students' division of the campaign. Colleges and schools throughout New England have contributed generously to the fund.

The student quota was $250,000, and already $300,000 has been pledged. Returns from Harvard indicated that a much smaller amount than was expected had been collected there. The committee, which has received $70,000 from Yale, reported that if Harvard could pass the $50,000 mark, the student division would go over the top.

Other colleges and schools have reported as follows: Smith College, $22,000; Wellesley, $22,000; Technology, $250,000; Holyoke, $17,000; Andover, $11,500, and Holy Cross, $10,000.

SOLDIER DEAD COMING HOME FOR BURIAL

Washington, Nov. 18.—The bodies of approximately 20,000 American soldiers and sailors now resting in French soil will be returned to the United States for re-burial at Federal expense in 1920, according to plans now being made by Secretary of War Baker and Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

Thus the nation's policy for generations of bringing home its dead for burial in American soil will be adhered to. The Army and Navy Departments will fulfil their trust as soon as the living soldiers, sailors and marines now in France are brought home. If it be the wish of the parents, every American soldier and sailor who fell in France will rest under the Stars and Stripes in a national cemetery.

The total number of American dead will not be known until the last casualty list discloses it. The list may swell by deaths from accidents and natural causes during the months of occupation of German and Austrian territory. Whatever it may be, all may have a final resting place in America. A large appropriation will be asked of Congress when the plans for reinterment are completed.

MAJ. McDONALD, WAR VETERAN, IS DEAD

Had Notable Philippine Record and Was Noted as an Advertising Expert

Major Fred McDonald, commander of the 3d Battalion, United States Guards, who for the first seven years of its existence was foreign advertising manager of the Boston AMERICAN, died at the City Hospital today following an attack of pleurisy.

Major McDonald was one of the best known military and advertising men in Massachusetts. He served fifteen years in the United States Army, including the period of the Spanish-American war and service in the Philippine Islands.

In the present war he was appointed Major in the United States Guards and was assigned to the responsibility of guarding government property, wharves, docks and railroads throughout New England. He also had charge of the 7th and 8th Battalions when the guards were organized.

FOUGHT IN PHILIPPINES.

Major McDonald was in several engagements in the Philippines and was recommended for bravery in the action at La Paz. His military record follows:

October 18, 1897—Enlisted Troop A, 1st Battalion Cavalry, M. N. G. Discharged October, 1899.

November 28, 1899—Commissioned second lieutenant, Company H, 8th Infantry, M. N. G.

Funeral arrangements are not yet completed, but on the day of the funeral the Department of the Northeast will be closed for a few hours. Major-General Crozier and staff will attend, and the 3d Battalion, U. S. Guards, will also attend in a body.

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

A Well Known Actress Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Simple Home Made Mixture.

Joicey Williams, the well known American actress, who was recently playing at the Imperial Theatre in St. Louis, Mo., made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 4 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Any druggist can put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray haired person look 20 years younger. This is not a dye, it does not color the most delicate scalp, is not stick or greasy and does not rub off.

HIGHEST TIDE IN NINE YEARS ON WATERFRONT

Atlantic Avenue Nearly Flooded as Water Rises 13.42 Feet, Driven by Storm

A flood tide, the highest in years, overflowed the wharves along the waterfront today and came within six inches of flowing into Atlantic avenue. The discharging of vessels was held up for nearly two hours and the waterfront district was alive with huge rats.

The tide measured 13.42 feet at the Charles River dam gauge. But tides at this time of year usually measure 11.7 feet and ordinary tides 9 feet. The easterly gale raging outside the harbor is responsible for the rise of water, waterfront men declared.

The tide was the highest since the East Boston tunnel station at the foot of State street was flooded nine years ago at about Christmas time.

The water was eighteen inches deep on Long Wharf roadway, and almost on a level with the threshold of the stores. Ships in their slips were lifted so high that discharging operations ceased for about two hours, beginning an hour before noon.

Wharf rats nearly as big as ordinary house cats gave battle to several terriers and sent women scurrying away screaming.

Try This for Dinner

AN old-fashioned dish, that goes by the name of Stocking Pudding, is delicious. Make a suet crust, roll flat, then spread with molasses, thinly-pared apples and a little spice. Roll the pastry up, turning in the ends, put into a cloth, and steam.

This Day in History

THIS is the anniversary of the dedication of St. Peter's in Rome in 1626. This largest Christian house of worship was begun about 1450. In 1546 Michael Angelo was put in charge, who redesigned the dome. The height to the top of this dome is 435 feet.

CHAPTER X.—Continued

"I STILL think Henry is a dear though I don't altogether understand him," Helen said thoughtfully.

"No doubt," Philippa assented. "But you'll find the mot juste standing him a little more galling, if you were his wife. You see, I didn't know that I was marrying a sort of sporting Mr. Skimpole."

"I wonder," Helen reflected, "how Henry and Mr. Lessingham will get on when there are none of one another?"

"I really don't care," Philippa observed indifferently.

"I used to bother sometimes—that was soon after you were married," Helen continued, "that Henry was just a little inclined to be jealous."

Philippa withdrew her eyes from the sea. There was a queer little smile upon her lips.

"Well, if he still is," she said, "I'll give him something to be jealous about."

"Poor Mr. Lessingham!" Helen murmured.

Philippa's eyebrows were raised.

Not Sorry

"Poor Mr. Lessingham?" she repeated. "I don't think you'll find that he'll be in the least sorry for himself."

"He may be in earnest," Helen reminded her friend. "You can be horribly attractive when you like, you know, Philippa."

Philippa smiled sweetly.

"It is just possible," she said, "that I may be in earnest myself. I've quarrelled pretty desperately with Henry, you know, and I'm a helpless creature without a little admiration."

Helen rose suddenly to her feet. Her eyes were fixed upon a figure approaching through the wood.

"You really aren't respectable, Philippa," she declared. "Throw away your cigarette, for heaven's sake and sit up. Some one is coming."

Philippa only moved her head lazily. The sunlight, which came down in a thousand little zigzags through the wind-tossed trees, fell straight upon her rather pale, defiant little face, with its unexpressed evasive charm, and seemed to find new depth of color in the red-gold of her disordered hair. Her slim, perfect body was stretched almost at full length, one leg drawn a little up, her hands carelessly drooping toward the grass. The cigarette still burning in the corner of her lips.

"I decline," she said, "to throw away my cigarette for any one."

"Least of all, I trust," a familiar voice interposed, "for me."

Philippa sat upright at once, smoothed her hair and looked a little resentfully at Lessingham. He was wearing a brown tweed knickerbocker suit, and he carried a gun under his arm.

"Whatever are you doing up here," she demanded, "and do you know anything about our game laws? You can't come out into the woods here and shoot things just because you feel like it."

He disposed of his gun and seated himself between them.

"That is quite right," he assured her. "Your neighbor, Mr. Windover, to whom those woods apparently belong, asked me to bring my gun out this morning and try to get a woodcock."

"Gracious! You don't mean that Mr. Winkover is here, too?" Philippa demanded, looking around.

Lessingham shook his head.

"His car came for him at the other side of the woods," he explained. "He was wanted to go on the Bench. I elected to walk home."

"And the woodcock?" she asked. "I adore woodcock."

He produced one from his pocket, took up her left hat, which was lying amongst the bracken, and busied himself insulating the pin feathers under the silk band.

"There," he said, handing it to her, "the first woodcock of the season. We got four, and I really only accepted one in the hope that you would like it. I shall leave it with the estimable Mills, on my return."

"You must come and share it," Philippa insisted. "Those boys of Norah's are coming in to dinner. Your gift shall be the piece de resistance."

"Then may I dine another night?" he begged. "This place encourages in me the grossest of appetites."

"Have no fear," she replied. "You will never see that woodcock again. I shall have it for my luncheon tomorrow. I ordered dinner before I came out, and though it may be a simple feast, I promise that you shall not go away hungry."

"Will you promise that you will never send me away hungry?" he asked, dropping his voice for a moment.

She turned and studied him. Helen, who had strolled a few yards away, was knee-deep in the golden-brown bracken, picking some gorgeously colored leaves from a solitary bramble bush. Lessingham had thrown his cap onto the ground, and his wind-tossed hair and the unusual color in his cheeks were both, in their way, becoming. His loose but well-fitting country clothes, his tie and soft collar, were all well chosen and suitable. She admired his high forehead and his firm, rather proud mouth. His eyes as well as his tone were full of seriousness.

"You know that you ought to be saying that to some Gretchen away across that terrible North Sea," she laughed.

"There is no Gretchen who has ever made my heart shake as you do," he whispered.

She picked up her hat and sighed.

"Really," she said, "I think things are quite complicated enough as they are. I am in a flutter all day long, as it is, about your mission here and your real identity. I simply could not include a flirtation amongst my excitements."

"I have never flirted," he assured her gravely.

"Wise man," she pronounced, rising to her feet. "Come, let us go and help Helen pick leaves. She is scratching her fingers terribly, and I'm sure you have a lovely, dear, economical creature, Helen," she added, as they strolled along. "I am perfectly certain that those are destined to adorn my dining-table, and, with chrysanthemum at sixpence each, you can't imagine how welcome they are. Come, produce the knife, Mr. Lessingham."

The knife was forthcoming, and presently they all turned their faces homeward. Philippa arrested both her companions on the outskirts of the wood, and pointed to the red-tiled little town, to the sombre, storm-beaten grey church on the edge of the cliff, to the peaceful fields, the stretch of gorse-sprinkled common, and the rolling stretch of green turf on the crown of the cliffs. Beyond was the well-defined blue sea, dotted all over with cargo steamers.

"Would one believe," she asked satirically, "that there should be scope here in this forgotten little spot for the brains of a—Mr. Lessingham?"

"Remember that I was sent," he protested. "The error, if error there be, is not mine."

By Appearances

"And after all," Helen reminded them both, "think how easily one may be misled by appearances. You couldn't imagine anything more honest than the faces of the villagers and the fishermen one sees about, yet do you know, Mr. Lessingham, that we were visited by burglars last night?"

"Seriously?" he asked.

"Without a doubt. Of course, Mainsail Haul is a favorite haunt of thieves. They could get in anywhere. Last night they chose the French windows and seem to have made themselves at home in the library."

"I trust," Lessingham said, "that they did not take anything of value?"

"They took nothing at all," Philippa sighed. "That is the humiliating part of it. They evidently didn't like our things."

"How do you know that you had burglars, if they took nothing away?" Lessingham inquired.

"So practical!" Philippa murmured. "As a matter of fact, I heard someone moving about, and I rang the alarm bell. Mr. Windover was downstairs almost directly, and we heard someone running down the drive. The French windows were open, a chair was overturned in the library, and a drawer in my husband's desk was wide open."

"The proof," Lessingham admitted, "is overwhelming. You were visited by a burglar. Does your husband keep anything of value in his desk?"

"Henry hasn't anything of value in the world," Philippa replied dryly, "except his securities, and they are at the bank."

"Without going so far as to contradict you," Lessingham observed, with a smile, "I still venture to disagree."

Conservation Pies

By Loretto C. Lynch

TURKEY or pie? If you can't have turkey at your Thanksgiving dinner this year, and you must substitute something else, you can still have your Thanksgiving savour of ante-bellum days if you will have some good pie.

The city housewife, with the many calls upon her time, will find it more convenient to purchase a pumpkin canned. Then, too, if you make your pumpkin pies at home you can have three pies for the price of one purchased at the baker-shop.

Here is a plain-crust war-time pie that almost any amateur can make successfully. A standard half-pint measuring cup is used and all measurements are taken level.

PIE CRUST.

Half a cup barley or rice flour, 1 cup wheat flour, ¾ teaspoonful salt, 1-3 cup vegetable shortening, ice water.

Mix and with flour; cut in shortening with two knives; moisten to a dough with iced water; toss on a floured board, pat, roll out very gently; now roll the paste up like a jelly roll; cut in half; roll out to thickness of a quarter inch; fit on a greased pie plate; brush over the edge with cold water and place ¾-inch rim of paste on it.

Light handling—especially rolling very gently—is essential for a tender crust. Having all ingredients cold an accurately measured is another essential. The quantity given above is enough for two fairly large one-crust pies.

Here is an excellent recipe for

PUMPKIN FILLING.

1¼ cup steamed and strained pumpkin, 2-3 cup molasses, ½ teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 2 eggs, 1 pint milk, 1 tablespoon melted butter.

Mix in the order given. Add the unbeaten eggs to the mixture and beat them as you beat the mixture.

So many people just eat the pumpkin filling and discard the crust that many housewives who are practicing conservation are making crustless pies. Just put the filling into the plate and bake it. If you wish, you can put a tiny rim of paste on the edge of the pan just for "appearance."

When a Girl Marries

A New Serial of Young Wedded Life

"DID she seem interested—impressed at all?" asked Jim anxiously.

It seemed queer that this was the part of my narrative that interested him most. I had thought he would either be annoyed at my borrowing from Virginia, or amused at the way it turned out that I need never have done it. But his mood was very thoughtful, and he frowned a bit and went back to brushing his hair again in silence when I told him that Virginia just took Sheldon's admiration for granted. He settled his cuffs and selected his tie and collar before he spoke again, but his words made me realize nothing I said had escaped him.

"You must have a regular allowance, Anne. I'm going to turn over the Haidane check to you each month. I wish it were more—but, at least, you can be sure of that hundred dollars. And with this game ankle of mine about all you can be sure of is the money I make—writing about it."

"Oh, Jim, tell me the truth!" I exclaimed, rushing over to tie his scarf. "Is that inspectorship too much for you? You must give it up at once!"

Jim laughed.

"There we go—off at a tangent again. I like my job—fine. Now I'll go see how near ready young Neal is—and you stop prettying me up and do a little prinking of your own."

I hurried into my very best gray chiffon—chief extravagance of my engagement days—tucked an orchid—artificial and guaranteed to last a season—into my belt, flung on my last year's coat of amethyst chinchilla cloth, and with a little prayer that Virginia might like Jim's lilac lady. I hurried out to join my two handsome "boys."

On the way out Jim stopped at the telephone desk to leave word that he was at the Rochambeau in case Mrs. Bryce and Captain Winston called. I couldn't stifle a pang of jealous wonder. Was it Betty with whom Jim had made plans for the evening—without consulting me?

In another minute I just choked that fear to death and girded myself for the winning of Virginia.

She greeted us very graciously on our arrival—and her cordiality extended to Neal, who was too absorbed in Phoebe to notice whether or not Virginia was among those present at her own party. Things went along splendidly at first, and I began to hope that the beautiful hostess might at least like me—even if the warmer loving were several degrees removed.

Virginia Makes a Friend

After a delicious and well-chosen dinner that stayed within the wartime "three courses," Virginia suggested that we go to the little "game room" for our coffee and cordials. And when Neal followed Phoebe's lead and said he didn't want so much as a creme-de-menthe, I decided that this was indeed the end of a perfect day.

Everything looked peaceful and like the best lithographs of "The Happy Family." There sat Jim and Virginia and I sipping the pretty emerald green mint through tiny straws, and chatting together with real interest, while Neal and Phoebe balanced the little tumbling figures of the odd little game called "cadlute," and Phoebe clapped her hands each time the dexterity of opponent juggled one of the leaden little men into the hole marked "10."

Suddenly I became aware of the fact that Jim was watching the game with avid interest, and that Virginia was watching Jim with two creases between her swallow's-wing eyebrows. There was something breathless about the pose of both brother and sister. But even while I was wondering what it could all be about, Jim straightened up, glanced around the room and with a glad cry rushed over to greet Terry and Betty, who stood in the doorway searching, no doubt, for us.

Betty was marvelous in the jade-green she so often affects. She was as distinguished in her odd, mermaid way as Virginia in her marble Greek-statue beauty.

"Who is that charming woman?" asked Virginia in the most enthusiastic tone I've ever heard her use to or of anyone save Jim.

How Fat Actress Was Made Slim

Many stage people now depend entirely upon Marmola Prescription Tablets for reducing and controlling fat. One clever actress tells that she reduced two to four pounds a week by using this new form of the famous Marmola Prescription and now, by taking Marmola Tablets several times a year, keeps her weight just right. All druggists sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at 75 cents for a large case. Or you can get them by sending price direct to the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. If you have not tried them do so. They are harmless and effective.

The Heart Breaker

A MODERN AMERICAN ROMANCE

Mildred Confesses to Her Sister That She Refused Arthur's Offer of Marriage

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER VIII.

Copyright, 1918, Star Company.

"WHO is Harold Hilton?" Mrs. Higgins inquired. "I never heard of him."

"He's a nephew of Mr. John Hilton," Mildred explained. "I never met him myself until yesterday. But as his uncle spoke of him as 'Harold,' I did, too."

"Oh, I thought it must be somebody you knew well," Mrs. Higgins remarked.

The speech was not intended as a reproof. Yet it irritated the girl, for she spoke brusquely.

"No, I do not know him well enough to call him by his first name. I am aware of that. I am still more certain that I wish I did know him well!"

The matron looked surprised. "Why, my dear!" she asked.

"Because he is a dandy chap. He is enlisting with the Canadians. Going to fight—just think of it!—risk his life when he might stay at home and be comfortable."

"A good many other fellows are doing the same thing—at least so the preacher told us tonight," Honora said. "Yet I fancy most of them are going because they want to. Either they—like young Hilton—have English blood in their veins, or they want the adventure. Some men crave that kind of thing—just as some women do."

"I must be one of that kind," Mildred hazarded. "For if I were a man I'd go in a jiffy."

"So you've said before," Honora observed, dryly.

Only a Casual Friend

"Pardon me for repeating myself," Mildred retorted. "But why snub me?"

"I did not mean to snub you," Honora said, trying to laugh off the little altercation.

She was heartened that she and her sister should have had a slight spat in the presence of Arthur Bruce. She was honest enough with herself to know that she had tried to keep Mildred from expatiating on the subject of Harold Hinton, because she was sure that the topic was causing Arthur discomfort. Such talk at this time showed a lack or tact on the part of the younger girl.

Yet, really, there was no cause for her, Honora, to defend Arthur. He was only a casual friend to her, as she was to him.

"Have you had a pleasant evening, my dear?" Mrs. Higgins was trying to pour oil on the troubled waters and was smiling at Mildred.

"Oh, pleasant enough, I guess," the girl replied. "I cannot speak for Arthur, of course. He can speak for himself."

Her passage-at-arms with Honora had annoyed her, and she felt cross with everybody. Arthur, thus appealed to, tried to hide his embarrassment.

"It is never necessary to say that one has had a good time in this home," he remarked, gallantly. "That is one of the things that speaks for itself."

Mrs. Higgins looked at him approvingly. She liked and admired this young man.

"I assure you we are always glad to see you here, Mr. Bruce," she said.

"Why must I be 'Mr. Bruce' to you?" he objected. "When I was a kid you called me 'Arthur.' How have I forfeited a right to such familiarity?"

The widow flushed as a girl might have done. "Oh, I have seen you so seldom since you were grown that I did not want to be too familiar with you," she explained. "But I will be glad to call you 'Mr. Arthur' if you would like me to."

A few minutes later he took his departure. By the time the sound of his footsteps had died away Mrs. Higgins spoke her mind.

"That is one of the most courtly and graceful young men I have ever known. I am glad you girls have such a friend. He can always be counted upon to do and say the right thing."

She had too much delicacy to put into words what she was thinking—namely, that he would make some girl a good husband, and that she hoped one or her charges would appreciate this fact.

Instead, she went out into the kitchen to give Katie a final order, then, returning, locked the front door, put out the lights, and led the way upstairs.

Mildred Apologizes

Mildred Brent's anger was seldom of the enduring variety. She was easily annoyed, but could not hold her wrath long.

So she and her sister had not been to their room more than five minutes before she made overtures of peace.

"Honora," she ventured, "if I was cross just now I am sorry. But you did snub me—honestly—and made me feel very cheap when you reminded me that I was repeating a remark that I had perpetrated already."

"I did not mean to snub you, dear, so let's forget all about it," Honora returned. "We were both a little cross, I fancy."

"It was rather awkward, that question that Mrs. Higgins asked," Mildred observed later. "I mean her question as to whether we had had a pleasant evening."

Honora was brushing her hair before her dressing table and now turned quickly, her brush poised in mid-air.

"Why?" she asked abruptly.

"Because," Mildred replied, "it so happens that Arthur proposed to me this evening."

The brush fell to the floor, Honora stooped to pick it up.

"And you——" she began, then stopped.

"Oh," Mildred said with a yawn, "I as good as told him I could not marry any man unless he did something to make him worth while. Well," after a moment's pause, "what do you think of my answer?"

"I think," Honora's voice was hard and stern, "that it was a needlessly cruel thing to say to a good man."

CHARLESTOWN YARD WILL BE KEPT GOING

Rumors of big real estate developments in Dorchester and Quincy because the Squantum plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation is to be taken over by the United States government for a navy yard to supplant the Charlestown Navy Yard, were denied today by S. G. Wakeman, manager of the Fore River and Squantum plants.

Mr. Wakeman declared that the shipbuilding contracts awarded to the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, which is operating both plants for the United States government, were sufficient to occupy the entire working force of both plants for at least a year.

He said that Secretary Daniels in a speech made at these plants about ten days ago had declared that the shipbuilding program would go on in spite of an armistice or peace.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels, who is in Washington, was reached by the AMERICAN today and reiterated his statement regarding the Squantum plant. He said that the government owned the Squantum plant and will continue to operate it. He also said that the government had no intention of giving up or transferring the Charlestown Navy Yard.

The company has built many boats for the navy and has under way several destroyers which are to be delivered in a few weeks. The building of many others is to follow.

Experts are said to have declared that the location of the Squantum plant is ideal for a sheltered navy yard with adequate room for expansion and deep channels to the main and outer harbor.

G. O. P. LEADERS FAVOR WAR POWERS OF WILSON

Washington, Nov. 18.—Senator Cummins' resolution for the cancellation of practically all the extraordinary war powers granted President Wilson by Congress will receive little support from old-line Republican party leaders in the Senate, it was indicated today. While they sympathize with the main purpose of the Cummins resolution—freeing business from the control of the various war boards created during the last eighteen months—they fear the passage of such a resolution by a Republican Congress would be interpreted in the country as an effort to obstruct President Wilson's policies for mere partisan purposes.

AUTOPSY ON GIRL'S BODY AT KENNEBUNK

Kennebunk, Me., Nov. 18.—Medical Examiner Charles F. Trayner of Biddeford today performed an autopsy on the body of Gladys Viola Perry, a fourteen-year-old schoolgirl whose body was found in the Mousam River yesterday. There is no suspicion that the case is one of murder. Deputy Sheriff Ernest L. Jones of this city has been investigating since Hallowe'en night, when the girl disappeared. He has found many girl companions who stated that she had repeatedly announced her intention of committing suicide.

WORK FOR ALL MEN RETURNING FROM SERVICE

Massachusetts manufacturers and employers today joined in the movement instituted by Everett Lord, State director of the United States Employment Service, to provide employment for returning soldiers.

Three important items were being surveyed by the Federal employment director and data furnished by all Massachusetts industrial and business concerns.

The data requested by Mr. Lord de:

1. What and how many war contracts cancelled?

2. How many workers needed for work still in hand, and are the establishments still operating on a war basis?

3. Number of men expected to return to their old positions upon being mustered out of service, and the disposition of the employer to returning soldiers?

Upon the conclusion of the general survey now under way by the Federal employment director, it is planned to distribute among employes a questionnaire which will contain questions relative to conditions, the change in which was brought about by the cessation of war.

BAY STATE SETS PACE.

Massachusetts has held the lead in the production of war materials, and in the opinion of the Federal directors the State will serve as a reliable barometer for other sections of the country in the classification and installation of returned soldiers in their former positions.

Simultaneously with the institution of the labor survey by Mr. Lord, an appeal was sent to the employers of the State of New Hampshire by Federal Employment Director Enos K. Sawyer, urging them to make room for or give employment to returning soldiers and sailors.

Concessions in favor of returning soldiers were urged by Mr. Sawyer, who says:

"I cannot conceive of any reason why we should not give our returning soldiers and sailors the best we can give them."

Steps have already been taken by the New Hampshire director to instruct the returning service men in vocational work.

TO REGAIN OLD POSITIONS.

Arrangements also have been made to replace every soldier and sailor in positions of the same class from which they resigned to enter the service.

Relative to reports that some employers were not enthusiastic over the proposed replacement of returning soldiers and sailors, Mr. Sawyer said:

"Certainly public spirit will demand that the men who have gone forth to fight for all that we hold sacred shall not lose their individual standing in the community. I cannot believe that any employer of labor, whose security has been assured by the efforts of our boys in the war, will hesitate to adequately reward our fighting men."

Father John's Medicine Builds New Strength During the Getting-Well Stage After Any Illness—Heals Throat and Lungs.

A Doctor's Prescription. Free From Alcohol and Dangerous Drugs—60 Years in Use.

The getting-well stage of grip is the most dangerous of all, because the body, weakened by the grip, is wide open to attacks of other lurking disease germs.

That is why all the organs of the body must be kept in their best working order, not only to drive out the poison left by the grip germ, but that the patient shall regain strength as soon as possible to avoid further attacks resulting from the poisons in the system.

As a means toward good health after the grip Father John's Medicine builds up the body because it is all pure, wholesome nourishment, and free from opium, morphine, chloroform or other poisonous drugs or alcohol. Father John's Medicine has had sixty years' success for colds and throat troubles, coughs and sore throats, and as a tonic and body builder.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

FANS WANT GOOD BALL IN 1919

By SAM CRANE.

New York, Nov. 18.—With the war over, and with glorious victory attained for our country and her Allies, it is now in line for the baseball club owners to get busy and figure on the revival of the sport for next season.

It is up to them to see how it can be reconstructed so as to eliminate all the objectionable features that were eating into the very life of the game.

The annual December meetings of both the National and American leagues will be held as usual, but much can be done before then to consider and discuss plans, ways and means for the betterment of the conditions that existed at the close of the season, and which were so dangerous to the welfare of the national pastime.

All through last season situations arose that were handled with such indiscretion and lack of diplomacy that the game was brought into more or less disrepute. This tends to antagonize the baseball public.

ALL HANDS TO BLAME.

Of course, the world's war, in which this country was most prominent, was in a way responsible for conditions, but the highest officials in baseball at times failed to sense the public pulse.

The players were occasionally wanting in plain common sense, and thereby added to the wave of disapproval that dashed against the bulwark of the game's popularity.

Means must be found to eradicate all these evils, and now is the time to begin by seeking the causes of the troubles. When these are found the remedy will be easy.

With the public confident by the winning of the world's war and all that it means, next season will be ripe for the re-establishment of baseball as the people's favorite and most popular game.

That it will have the biggest boom in its long history is assured if those in charge handle its rejuvenation in the proper way.

MUST CLEAN HOUSE.

The readjustment of the business end of the sport will go with its reconstruction, and that must be from top to bottom. There must be a general house cleaning, not on the surface alone, but in the corners and from roof to cellar.

There must be cooperation by all those who have the best interests of the game at heart and by those who are aware of the great transformation that is absolutely needed to put the sport firmly on its feet again.

It will take time, but it can be done. Matters will be so brought to a head that at the coming December meetings the new regime could have its inning and be given a grand sendoff.

10 Years Ago In Sport World

THE third day of the six-day bicycle race started at 3 p. m. and will continue till 1 a. m. to give the theatrical folks a chance to see the fun. Eleven of the twelve teams remain on even terms, having covered 442 miles & laps in twenty hours of racing. (Some great teams took part. Betcha can't tell which won.)

"THEY can't find my weak spot! That's the reason of my success," said Packy McFarland in speaking of his rapid rise to the front. No, Packy, they can't; but you and Mike Gibbons found a soft spot one night down at Manhattan Beach, didn't you?)

* * *

KID McCOY, former heavyweight pugilist, has turned bookmaker. With a bankroll of something like $16,000, the Kid leaves shortly for Savah, Ga., to make a book on the auto races. (If you're still at it, Kid, and give better than 15, 6 and 3, come on up and we'll give you a play.)

* * *

EDDIE STANTON, clever featherweight, has arrived back from the Pacific Coast. While there he cleaned up in great style (no, he wasn't a porter) by taking the measures of Sandy Welsher, Kid Eaton and Joe Neary. (Any of you chaps know that Eddie is a native of Marlboro?)

* * *

THAT good things can occasionally be picked up cheap is evidenced by the fact that Red Box 2.04¼, once sold for $85. (Such things can be picked up quite often is right. You should hear the story of the ex-jockey who sold us a pawn ticket on a diamond ring.)

* * *

JOE THOMAS, middleweight, makes his first appearance in a New York ring when he fights Jack Britton Friday night in a six-round bout. (Listen, that bout never materialized in New York, you mean. It's right here in Boston. Recollect, 17?)

* * *

OWEN MORAN and Jem Driscoll both claim the featherweight championship of England. A ring is the only place for them to finish their argument. (A ring might have finished their argument, but I know one case where a ring started an argument and, by the way, it isn't finished yet.)

GEHRKE IS NOW SPEED BOY AT STADIUM

Harvard's football squad is hard at it for Saturday's game with Boston College. The men were out on the gridiron at 8 a. m. today and remained in action till 10.

Coach Dénovan has a husky rumbline, as service teams generally go, and all it needs is plenty of work to get it into tip-top shape.

Gehrke, a 170-pound halfback, who came out late last week, has made a fine impression, and is pretty certain to start against the Maroon and Old Gold. His line-plunging has been strong and his defensive play O. K.

Considerable consternation is felt by the squad over the report that the men, who are members of the S. A. T. C., will be inoculated this week with the conformer of the university's soldiers. Sore arms and football do not agree, at all, at all.

Captain Daley's heavy cold has left him, and from now on he will be in his togs regularly. He was especially pleased at Devens' victory over Naval Radio, for Captain George Hoban has always been one of his Dartmouth ideals.

FULLERTON'S COLUMN

The past week I had four letters from former ball players, who are "over there," and do you know what the letters contained? First, an appeal for the baseball news from home; then an enthusiastic lot of praise of the life in the army and navy.

The only complaint in any letter was this: "It's great; the only thing I kick on is getting up at 5.30. That's early enough to go to Braves Field for a double-header."

The third item in each letter was about the same—expressions of wonder and some disgust that many of the players did not jump at the chance to see service.

The writers of these letters have not seen each other excepting in one instance months ago, when two met. They are in different commonds, and only two ever worked on the same club. Yet the four letters might have been written by one fellow. If they all feel that way, it must be great.

ONE ON MAJOR HUSTON.

Major Huston, part owner of the New York Yankees, is one of the finest fellows baseball has produced of the S. A. T. C., will be inoculated this week with the conformer of the university's soldiers. Sore arms and football do not agree, at all, at all.

Captain Daley's heavy cold has left him, and from now on he will be in his togs regularly. He was especially pleased at Devens' victory over Naval Radio, for Captain George Hoban has always been one of his Dartmouth ideals.

TACKS HARDWICK BACK AND WARMLY WELCOMED

Captain Huntington R. (Tacks) Hardwick, former Harvard football star, who returned to America from France, last Friday, could not withstand a chance to see a football game right away and was one of the interested spectators at Saturday's Camp Devens-Radio battle in Harvard Stadium. He was warmly greeted by his legion of friends and admirers.

HALFBACK NAGLE LOST TO RADIO ELEVEN FOR REMAINDER OF SEASON

Jack (Pinkie) Nagle, crack Radio School halfback broke his collarbone in the Devens game Saturday and won't play again this season.

Nagle, despite his slight weight, was one of the gamest men on the squad. He was injured after running a successful forward pass for a gain of fifteen yards.

Johnny Clifford, who was also knocked out, is expected to be able to report on his togs by mid-week. A wrenched ankle is his ailment.

Radio will resume practice in the Stadium tomorrow in preparation for its contest on the Polo Grounds, New York, next Saturday with the Pelham aviators.

Practically all of Ty Cobb's clashes with other players were due to his quick flashes of temper and his scathing criticism which hurt all the more because it usually was simple truth. He and Bush never were very close friends and Donie always fought him back and gave as good as he sent.

One day in a game Ty was racing from first to third on a hit and Donie, going from second, stopped at third, so that the two of them were trying to occupy the base.

"What are you doing here?" Cobb yelled angrily.

"Where are you going, you stiff?" demanded Bush, just as mad.

"I'm going back to second," Cobb announced and, whirling, shot for second base, slid a twister around the baseman and was safe.

JONES WAS IMITATING.

One of the funniest things Cobb ever said was to Davy Jones. Davy was quite a ball player himself, very fast and a good hitter. One day he was up at bat with three balls and no strikes called and he swung on the next ball and popped out.

"That's fine hitting, three and nothing," Cobb jeered as Davy returned to the bench.

"I've seen you do it lots of times," Jones retorted.

"Yes," said Cobb, complacently, "but I'm a good player."

The funny thing about it was that it wasn't conceit at all. Cobb knew he was great and simply stated facts, and the fact that the others knew this made it the more galling.

MEEHAN MEETS HIS MASTER IN FULTON

San Francisco, Nov. 18.—Fred Fulton, Rochester, Minn., heavyweight, won the decision from Willie Meehan, conqueror of Jack Dempsey, in a four-round bout in the Exposition Auditorium, Saturday night.

Fulton was given the decision by Referee Tim Griffin, and the capacity "house" found little chance to dispute his decision.

Fulton won by the proverbial mile. He hammered and slugged Meehan at will, but was not able to land a knockout. Meehan put up his usual game, aggressive fight, but his heavier opponent was too strong for him.

The fight was staged for the benefit of the War Camp Community Fund. It was a battle royal from the tan of the gong until the close of the last round.

FRANK KRAMER ASKED TO RIDE IN NEW YORK SIX-DAY BIKE GRIND

New York, Nov. 18.—Jimmy Johnston, who will manage the international six-day bike race in Madison Square Garden week of December 1-7, has sent Frank Kramer a flattering offer to enter the grind.

The famous rider, who made a wonderful "comeback" this year and won his seventeenth world's title, has promised to give his answer in a few days.

Kramer has just had an X-ray picture taken of his knees. He had trouble with his legs last year during the race and was forced to drop out when it looked as if he would win.

That is why Kramer is holding off with his answer. It is his ambition to win a six-day race before he retires, but he will not enter another grind, he declares, unless he is in perfect condition.

EXTRA MATINEES NOW PLANNED FOR METS

While last Saturday's matinee concluded the Fall series of the Metropolitan Driving Club, the officials announce there will be racing at the Charles River Speedway next Saturday afternoon. Having been underlined for Thanksgiving Day, when Oregon Hal will make another assault on the coast's mile record.

QUINCY FIVE PLANS BANG-UP SEASON

Manager Jimmy Dailey of the Quincy City Five will open the season at the Coliseum Thursday evening, December 5.

In the Granite City lineup such stars as Finn, Curtis, Curtin, O'Rourke and Scollard will be seen. Teams desiring game communicate with Manager Dailey at No. 79 Adams st., Quincy.

W. AND J. ELEVEN QUITS, AS TEAM IS ALL RIDDLED

Washington, Pa., Nov. 18.—Washington & Jefferson, with the bulk of its gridiron stars in the service, has decided to "bow down" to the victorious Saturday's defeat by Geneva was the last straw. It was the first time that outfit has vanquished W. and J. since 1894.

Holiday Game Wanted

The Metropolitan A. C. would like to arrange a game for Thanksgiving morning with any 115-120-pound football team around Greater Boston on home grounds. Address "Dick" Bonagine, 2 Loring st., Somerville, or phone 4287-W Somerville, between 5 and 7 p. m.

POLO LEADERS IN BATTLE TO BREAK TIE

Captain Hardy's Boston roller polo team will entertain Jesse Burkett's Cambridge outfit at the Arena tonight. The Hub team is locked in a tie for first place with two of its rivals, and, judged on past performance, is bound to remain in the hunt for the flag.

Lowell calls on Providence in the second game of tonight's round.

INDIAN CHIEF AND COLORED STAR CLASH

By GILL.

CLAY TURNER, the sensational Indian light heavyweight, and Kid Norfolk, of Panama, who meet in the feature bout at the Arena tomorrow night, are in excellent shape for the contest.

The Indian has been in the game for three years, but it was not until his decisive defeat of Battling Levinsky in an eight-round bout at Jersey City that the critics paid much attention to the Indian.

Another good attraction on the card is the eight-pound bout between Charley Parker of the South End and Jim Frezzette of Bridgewater. This will be their first meeting since they deserted the amateur ranks.

* * *

THE following card has been arranged by the matchmaker of the Knickerbocker A. C. of Portsmouth, N. H., for next Thursday night: Finney Boyle of Lowell vs. Billy Woods of Manchester, N. H., 12 rounds; and Johnny Gray of Chelsea vs. Charlie Parker of Boston, eight rounds.

* * *

PAT OWENS of Cambridge and Johnny Russell of New York been matched to meet at Lowell next Thursday night. They will fight twelve rounds. Charlie Miller of the South End will box Mike Frasers of New Haven in the semi-final; Young Chodo of the North End will clash with Tommy Hogan and Young Dundee of the North End will meet Jask Bowen of Roxbury.

* * *

LEW TENDLER, Philadelphia's hardhitting lightweight challenger, will box Barney Adair at the Matty Baldwin benefit Thursday night, according to an announcement by Representative Tom Green, chairman of the committee in charge of the benefit.

Chief Clay Turner and Kid Norfolk will be on hand to box any boys the referee chooses. As yet the boys have not all been paired up for the bouts, but the committee has a large list to work with.

HENRY HALEY, thirty-five years old, known in the sporting world as "Texas" Tate, a heavyweight boxer, was shot and killed in Little Rock, Ark., last week. Another boxer, Joe Shaw, is being sought by the officials. Tate's chief fight for fame came last New Year's Day, when he won on a foul from Fred Houlton in Little Rock.

OLD GLORY HELPED TO MAKE GOLF HOLE IN 1

Holes in 1 on a golf course are rare enough and carefully recorded by almost every organised club, but when Old Glory has a hand in aiding the elusive ball to drop into the shallow cup it seems worthy of wider renown. It is the reason for the search for a communication from J. W. Abbott, of the Ogden Golf and Country Club, who attests to the following facts:

W. H. Wattis, a resident of Ogden, made a mashie shot on the fifth hole, which is the green, 135 yards away. The ball struck a mashie shot on the fifth hole, which is the green, 135 yards away. The ball struck the flag-stick and then rebounded to the ground, where it rested. Wattis, seeing the ball in its folds, as an expert spider might have done with unwary flies, then dropped it like a plummet, into the cup.

LALLY GETS TOUCHDOWN THAT SETTLES BATTLE

Little Building's Headquarters' football machine, showing the best of form and easily defeated by Jackson Cangell, defeated Bumkin Island at Hoag Field, 6-0. The battle was fought in the rain and on a well soaked gridiron. Lally turned in the touchdown and followed by kicking goal. Bumkin Island's band entertained between halves.

WATERTOWN HIGH OUT TO LAND LEAGUE FLAG

Watertown High stands at the top in the Mystic Valley Football League, with but two games to play. Only four games remain to be played, and two of these will be contested this week, Wakefield at Arlington, Wednesday, and Melrose at Watertown, Friday.

CORBETT'S CORNER

This is an article which deals with some very simple stretching and breathing exercises which can be performed upon arising in the morning—and with fine benefit to the health.

Do not jump right out of bed upon awakening in the morning. As you open your eyes lay inert for a few seconds. Then straighten out the legs—flat on the bed—so they will be on a line with the head.

Stretch legs as far as you can, and at the same time stretch your arms to the utmost toward the sides of the bed. Continue this stretching of arms and legs for a few seconds.

Now relax and put arms at side of body. Now stretch arms down toward knees, fingers outstretched, stretching legs at the same time.

Under no circumstances should head, upper part of body or legs be raised from the bed.

Take a long, deep breath—to the limit of your lungs. Inhale through the nose. Hold breath about five seconds and then exhale—only—through the mouth.

Repeat this breathing three times, keeping muscles rigid. Remember that the real value of exercising comes only through the tensing of the muscles.

EARLY MORNING EXERCISE.

After completing breathing exercise, lay relaxed for a few seconds and then stiffen legs and body again. Throw off the covers and start getting out of bed, but in doing so do not bend the spine.

Merely wheel the body around in bed, keeping it on a line perpendicular with that position which you occupied before.

When legs extend out over side of bed, bend the knees and let the body follow the direction of your legs.

When your toes touch the floor lift your body to a sitting position without any aid from the hands.

Stand erect, with feet from six to twelve inches apart and then try to touch the floor with the tips of your fingers. In doing so, do not bend the knees.

If you cannot quite touch the floor go as near to it as possible. When going through this bending exercise, which you are to repeat three times, be sure to stiffen the muscles, which gives you the needed resistance of muscle against muscle.

HOW TO STRENGTHEN LEGS.

Take the erect position again and with right hand try to touch the floor on your left side. This will require the lifting up of your right leg and then moving toward the floor with your left hand. But do not bend left leg forward.

Repeat this three times and then repeat the touching of the floor with the right hand three times.

Do not sit down while putting on your hose. Lay flat on your back on the floor. Lift up both legs and put the hose on while in that position.

Keep legs as high up as possible, but within reaching distance of the hands. This mode of putting on your hose exercises the stomach, arm, leg and chest muscles and is very helpful for the spine.

Do not bend your back when putting on your shoes. Kneel on the left from on the floor while putting on the right shoe and on the right knee when you are putting on the left shoe.

After you have completed the rest of your dressing, which should be done in the ordinary way, stand erect, hands at sides, draw back the head, put out the chest, stiffen every muscle in your body and take three more long deep breaths.

Do these light exercises for about a week and the results will startle you so much that you will do them throughout the rest of your lifetime.

PLAN TO REDUCE BIG LEAGUES' PLAYER LIMIT

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 18.—If the big leagues resume operations on the ball field next season, as now seems likely, it is probable that the player limit for each club will be reduced to eighteen men.

The National Baseball Commission has decided upon this move and will recommend that the plan be adopted by the two baseball leagues at their annual meetings next month.

The suggestion is in line with the retrenchment that is believed necessary during the process of reconstruction, both in the sport and in the management of the game. Lowering the player limit from 25 to 18 men will mean the elimination of more all-around players.

The commission also decided to inflict another blow to three members of the world's championship team by playing exhibition games through the East after the World's Series with a team advertised as the Boston Red Sox. Amos Strunk, Joe Bush and Walter Schang are the players declared to be guilty of the practice.

The decision to withhold the usual World's Series championship emblems from the Boston players because of the part they played in the World's Series "strike" was reaffirmed.

CLEAR DEMPSEY IN BOXING FIASCO

New York, Nov. 18. — James W. Coffroth, national supervisor of boxing for the United War Work Fund, today absolved Jack Dempsey from all blame for the fiasco at Madison Square Garden Saturday night when Dempsey failed to exhibit his prowess with the gloves.

"Two apologies are due as a result of the show," said Coffroth, "one to Dempsey and one to the boxing public here.

"Dempsey came in good faith to keep an advertised engagement with Joe Bonds, and the public turned out to see the contest. Dempsey entered the ring. Bonds did not, and who got to Bonds and concocted the scheme I don't know.

"Various pugilists were hoisted into the ring and Dempsey offered to meet any one of them. Jack Kearns, his manager, appealed to me and I advised him not to accept a forced piece of trickery."

The managers of Joe Jeanette, Kid Norfolk, and a giant Ethiopian who clambered into the ring to throw a scare into Dempsey attempted to put over a hoax on the Western boxer, it is explained, feeling that he would be forced to box one of these men if Bonds refused to go on.

BIDS FOR CARDS FEW AND FAR BETWEEN

St. Louis, Nov. 18.—"What is going to become of the St. Louis Cardinals?" continues to be one of the leading questions before the baseball magnates.

It is now rumored that a syndicate of Kansas City business men stands ready to pay $500,000 for the franchise. Phil Ruffi, owner of the Cardinals, refuses to asked for advice by Cardinal stockholders, it is said that he suggested the sale as a second choice.

His first suggestion, to meet the debts of the club, was the sale of the Cardinals' park for enough to cover Mrs. Helen H. Britton's claims and Ruffi's share of the team's games to his wife.

EX-PENN CREW CAPTAIN IS WOUNDED IN ACTION

Captain Fred Denny Cox, who stroked Penn's varsity crew in 1917, has been wounded in action. He won his commission as a second lieutenant shortly was promoted to the rank of captain.

Drayton is the third member of the Red and Blue crew to be mentioned in the casualty lists. Lieutenant Harry Ross was killed in a fall from an airplane and Lieutenant Carl Glass died of illness.

Craigin hopes to receive an appointment to West Point next February. In the meantime he will remain as instructor at Mitchell School and in coaching the football eleven.

WINSORS SETTING HOT PACE IN PIN LEAGUE

The Winsor Club is out in front in the Amateur Boston Pin League, having a four-point lead over Colonial Club and Winthop Yacht Club, which are tied for second place. Tonight's schedule:

Candy First Choice of U. S. Soldiers for Christmas

Candy, first, last and always!

That is the choice of the American soldier for his Christmas package, according to the soldiers themselves. Make it chocolate-coated caramels if possible, or home-made fudge and butterscotch, say the boys.

Next to candy they want cake—sweet cake, not the sugar-conserving kind. Fruit cake and sweet, hard cookies are preferred, as they keep well. Photographs of the family are well toward the head of the list, and if there is any room left in the package, fill it up with brown buttons, thread, safety pins and the like. The doughboy has become a needle expert these days.

Razor blades are popular, and so are cigarettes, although these are available at the huts and the boys would rather get things that are more difficult to obtain "over there."

Is Christ Coming Literally Soon?

Evangelist E. L. Cardey delivered an interesting, address Sunday night at York Square Theatre again. He showed from the many Bible texts used that Christ promised to return literally to this earth. Paul and all the apostles taught the same truth.

Mr. Cardey showed that many of the events taking place around us today, Christ said would come to pass just before the second Advent.

Those desiring the sermon with all the Bible texts used, should send 5 cents in stamps to same in printed form, free, address Mr. Cardey, 604 Tremont Temple, Boston. Subject for next Sunday night, "Will Socialism or will the Church Rule the World?"

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN NOVEMBER 18, 1918. BOSTON.

The Problems of Reconstruction Must Now Be Sensibly Met

Lloyd George in his statesmanlike address of Wednesday pertinently asks: "What are conditions of peace?" and then continues: "They must lead to a settlement which will be fundamentally just. No settlement that contravenes the principles of eternal justice will be a permanent one."

The people have had two years of war declamation—very patriotic, of course, but not much help to right knowledge and impartial judgment.

We think most Americans are more than ready to hear sensible and instructive discussion—that they are ANXIOUS to know more about the problems which Europe and America now face.

Of course, every street car contains statesmen who can settle the peace problems off-hand—just like that.

The solution is very simple.

Let each people, big or little, immediately set up a government of its own choosing in its own territory.

Nothing could be more delightfully easy.

Let there be a Jugo-Slav State, a Czecho-Slovak State, a Rumanian State, a Bulgarian State, a Grecian State, a Polish State, a Ukrainian State, a Lithuanian State, and so on to the end of the chapter, each people occupying its own territory and all living in democratic brotherhood.

Unfortunately, the program presents difficulties which the Peace Congress cannot ignore as easily as these off-hand publicists and orators do.

For instance, the Jugo-Slavs and Italy both lay ardent claim to Dalmatia and all that coast of the Adriatic Sea, and both profess an entire willingness to fight over that particular territory.

In the meantime the Czecho-Slovaks announce that they intend to have a strip of this territory, so that they can have access to the Adriatic and that, if it is necessary, they are ready to cross swords with either Italy or Serbia over this question.

Now, to whom does Dalmatia rightfully belong, and who can settle this question to the satisfaction of three antagonistic nations?

Then there is Albania, which the Albanians naturally want for themselves and which both Italy and Greece lay claim to, with Serbia asserting its right to a bite of the pie.

Six years ago Greece, Bulgaria, Serbia and Montenegro temporarily disposed of Albania by dividing it among themselves, without troubling about how the Albanians felt. But it is evident that each people is to have the right to set up independently in its own territory. Then the Albanians must have that right. And there comes in the question of what is Albanian territory, because the Albanians insist that the sanjaks of Argyro-Castro and Korista are Southern Albania and the Greeks insist that they are Northern Epirus—and there you have a very pretty and somewhat ancient cause of quarrel.

Then there is Macedonia, which is inhabited by Greeks, Serbs and Bulgars—as well as Moslems—and to which Greece, Serbia and Bulgaria all lay claim.

An off-hand editorial settlement of that dispute is much easier than a practical and permanent settlement, as some perspiring European statesmen painfully realize.

Then there are the German-inhabited divisions in the periphery of Bohemia. The Czecho-Slavs swear they will have this territory or fight. But the inhabitants want to be united to the new German-speaking Austrian State. And if this is refused to them, what becomes of the doctrine of self-determination?

Then there is the Dobrudja, which Rumania stole from Bulgaria in a by no means creditable way, and which Bulgaria got back temporarily a couple of years ago. Which ought to have the Dobrudja? And to whom does Bessarabia rightfully belong—the territory the happily defunct Czar stole from Rumania?

Then there is Poland to consider. The Poles lay claim to a fine strip of territory which is now included in the Ukrainian Republic and which the Ukrainians stoutly assert to be properly Ukrainian territory.

Any one who is even superficially acquainted with feelings that Poles and Ruthenians entertain toward each other will realize that the Peace Conference will have done something if it settles this dispute permanently.

Then there are the Poles in Galicia and the Poles of Poland proper. They love one another much as a Catholic Irishman loves an Orange Irishman.

The Russian Poles are violently enamored of annexing the Galician Poles, and the Galician Poles are ardently determined to remain apart from the Russian Poles.

That is another problem which does not seem to occur to the orators and editors who airily dispose of Polish troubles by reconstituting ancient Poland—on paper.

The Lithuanians, too, have their ideas as to the rightful ownership of other territory to which the Pan-Polacks lay title, and are quite prepared to put up the usual argument between States which cannot agree upon territorial ownership.

These are only some of the overlapping and conflicting territorial claims of the numerous petty States that propose to set up in business for themselves.

Then there is Germany. What is the best way to deal with the German people—seventy millions of human beings, who certainly cannot be exterminated and who must continue to be members of the family of mankind, in spite of bloodthirsty fireside warriors?

Having put an end to German militarism—which was a creature of a wrong theory of the relations of States practiced, prior to 1914, by Russia, Austria-Hungary, Turkey and the Balkan kingdoms, as well as by Germany in its entirety—shall we now attempt to destroy the future progress and productivity of these millions of people or shall we aid them on the road to democratic liberty and to a happy, useful career among the nations of the earth?

These are questions that must be answered right if our children are to live in a world at peace.

And if this war is to breed only new hatreds, new revenges meditated in secret, new wars to be fought when strength has been renewed, then what a waste, what a dreadful waste, of blood and tears this awful conflict will have been, and how uselessly will have died the innumerable multitudes of the dead!

Then, in addition to all these formidable problems, there are the menaces and confusions springing from the declarations of civil war now being issued with startling rapidity by the International—for that is exactly what these revolutionary movements now on foot in Europe are—declarations of civil war by the proletariats against the capitalists and aristocrats and bureaucrats.

The great war was itself a conflict of two POLITICAL systems—autocracy against democracy—a war between States.

This new war, so far as it has developed, is a conflict between two ECONOMIC systems—a war between classes, a war WITHIN States.

The POLITICAL WAR was waged to establish and to emphasize NATIONALISM—to create and to perpetuate a number of new States. All dominated by one all powerful autocracy.

The ECONOMIC WAR now breaking out in Europe has for its object THE DESTRUCTION OF NATIONALISM and the end of all States.

The International itself defines internationalism as "a political ideal based on the premises that nations are political devices, whereby the privileged minority can set against one another the workers of the world, who would otherwise compose one homogeneous humanity."

The International regards patriotism, devotion to a flag, love of national territory, pride in a national name and all kindred sentiments as ideals too narrow for the modern world, as relics of ages when no people had the inclination or the means to travel far and to become acquainted with other peoples.

The International believes that national sentiments should be relegated to museums, along with the armor, weapons, thrones and paraphernalia of the past.

The International really proposes to set up a world State, with the workers in sole control, and in which the only capitalists shall be the communities.

Instead of a League of Nations, the International proposes the abolition of nations—a world freed from State boundary lines, from tariffs, from armies and navies, from emperors, kings, presidents, cabinets, ambassadors and all the personnel and paraphernalia of sovereign, individual governments.

It will not do to laugh at these proposals of the International, because the International is not something to be laughed at or sneered out of existence.

It is making its appeal for support in Russia, Bulgaria, Rumania, Austria, Hungary and Bohemia, six former empires and kingdoms, whose populations number two hundred and forty millions, which is more than the combined populations of the United States, Great Britain, France and Italy.

And it now seems that Germany, with its 70,000,000 population, is about to come under Socialist control.

The International has in its ranks millions of veteran soldiers, and it possesses more arms and munitions of war than there were in the world in July, 1914.

Only fools will laugh at such a giant force as this.

The International is thoroughly determined to break the old institutions of society into pieces.

It is thoroughly determined to fight, thoroughly determined to array the masses against the classes.

It means, if it can, to destroy every flag and every separate sovereignty on earth—every vestige of nationalism.

Thus we see that at the very time when the centuries-old struggle between autocracy and democracy has been terminated, two other hostile and irreconcilable principles are beginning to face each other to fight for the rule of the world.

And whether this struggle shall be largely a physical struggle, with enormous letting of blood and destruction of wealth, or whether it shall be chiefly an intellectual struggle fought out on evolutionary and educational lines, will depend greatly upon the wisdom and justice and foresight of the arbiters who formulate the settlement of this political war.

If such statesmanship as that displayed by Roosevelt and Lodge and European leaders of like caliber and like ways of thinking does make the settlements of this political war upon the old bases of divided spoils and inflicted revenges and economic restrictions and compresses, then we can see little hope that the peace of the world will long endure, or perhaps even have a real beginning.

It is men like President Wilson, David Lloyd George, Clemenceau, Arthur Henderson and Albert Thomas—men with ideals and forward-looking vision—whose concepts must be embodied in the peace settlements, if those settlements are to be worth the parchment upon which they are written. The foundations of the new order of things that must rise on the ruins of the old order of things must be laid securely by men whose intellects go hand in hand with broad sympathies, with just ideals and with profound devotion to the welfare of the whole human race.

Such are some of the mighty problems that now knock at the doors of thought and demand answer.

No one man's mind can provide the answers to these riddles of revolution.

The combined minds of the world must work out the answers.

And we ought all of us to join in this mental labor. That is the way to arrive at the wisest and justest conditions.

And unless the war settlements are wise and just we will not have to wait long until the war drums beat again, and again civilization cowers beneath the lightnings and thunders and the red rain of battle.

God save the world from such another day of wrath and doom!

OUT IN the desert.
OF COLORADO.
IN A little town.
THAT THEY call Indio.
IS A friend of mine.
NAMED "W. L. R."
AND NEAR where he lives.
IS ANOTHER man.
IN A neat little house.
AND A great big yard.
AND WHERE this is.
IT USED to be sand.
THAT BURNED in the sun.
AND THEN grew cold.
WITH THE chill of night.
AND IN all the place.
WHERE THE yard now lies.
THERE WAS no life.
AND SO it had been.
SO FAR as it ran.
IN THE memory of man.
AND THE neighbor came.
AND A house was built.
AND A fence grew up.
AND FROM up on the hills.
WHENCE THE water came.
TO THE little town.
CAME THE life of the hills.
AND IT tempered the heat.
OF THE noonday sun.
AND TEMPERED the chill.
OF THE desert night.
AND THE sun.
AND THE night.
AND THE melted snows.
AND THE neighbor man.
HELD COUNSEL there.
AND A seed was set.
AND ANOTHER seed.
AND THE life of the hills.
WENT INTO them.
AND THEY crowded their way.
THROUGH THE blistered sand.
AND DRANK of the hills.
AND SEARCHED for the sun.
AND SO they grew.
TILL THE square of sand.
THAT THE fence held in.
HAD ALL grown green.
EXCEPT FOR spots.
WHERE FLOWERS came.
AND THE sun.
AND THE snow.
THEY HAD run away.
AND THE desert chill.
PAINTED WONDROUS hues.
WHERE THE flowers grew.
AND THE town went by.
AND STOPPED on its way.
AND STOOD at the fence.
AND BREATHED of the life.
AND FEASTED its eyes.
AND INSIDE of the fence.
THE NEIGHBOR man.
WENT ON his way.
AND IN all of the town.
THERE WAS but one.
WHO COULDN'T see.
WHERE THE sand had been.
AND HE was the neighbor man himself.
AND HIS eyes were blind.
BUT HIS was the joy.
AND THE greatest joy.
FOR HIS was the work.
THAT HAD been wrought.

I THANK you.

Wilson and George Disliked Wealth and Poverty Destroy Fafner, Horrible Example The Picnic Is Ended

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1918.

Lloyd George and Woodrow Wilson are held alike, by Tories in their respective countries.

Our Tories of finance accepted Wilson against the grain. They did not like his putting taxes on those able to pay them, and they disliked other things. But while our war lasted, and before it started, they were raking money in faster than any taxing system could take it. So they took the money and said nothing.

When peace loomed up they made a successful fight for a reactionary Congress.

Lloyd George was hated by Tories and all prosperity in England with the most intense bitterness before the war started. No man was more shamefully insulted and abused by everything "respectable" in England. When he took charge of the empire's finances, he said to the class that had money: "You want the world's greatest fleet and many things. You shall have them all as usual, but with this slight change from the past. You shall pay for them. I am not going to put the taxes on the little people."

That was enough. He was warned by the prosperous that they would take their money to the continent, they would not live under such a shameful demagogue, etc.

Later they were glad that Lloyd George had turned up, for he saved them and their empire.

Now comes the first general election in England since the war began.

Lloyd George asks the British, as Woodrow Wilson asked the Americans, to elect a parliament that will continue to support him in the work of reconstruction.

The prosperous that owe him continuance of their prosperity, and the more ignorant workmen, unaware of the fact that they owe freedom and life itself to Lloyd George, will very probably vote against him.

If republics were only ungrateful, that wouldn't make much difference. They are also foolish.

"You say the King of England will surely remain on his throne, and other kings will probably not remain. What about the Belgian King?"

The reader who asks this question is advised to study the record of the Socialist party in Belgium. It is a powerful party, well led. The Belgian King has deserved well of his country and of all the Allies, France especially. But "monarchies are destroyed by poverty and republics by wealth." The danger to kings in Europe just now lies in the great poverty of the people. And, by the way, the danger for law and order in this excessively rich republic lies in the foolishness and short-sightedness of those that have the money.

"I lie and possess, let me sleep," says Wagner's capitalistic dragon Fafner. It would have paid him to stay awake and study events.

Fafner is offered as a horrible example to certain gentlemen in the United States who believe that working people are machines to be moved about, regulated and controlled according to the financial needs and high moral whims of a minority.

Let high finance read what happened when the Jesuit fathers tried in South America to establish a social order that failed to take human nature into account. One man if he means it, can upset any plans.

Another king goes overboard. Ludwig of Bavaria, who said he would claim the Kaiser's job, gives up his little one-horse throne. Wise Ludwig!

The Socialists in Holland are determined to get rid of royalty three, and probably will do it. The Dutch Landsturm has been called out to control the mob. But this isn't a propitious moment for shooting up the population. They have been enlightened. Everywhere, except in England, things will save trouble by getting out. Here in America they will avoid trouble by showing moderation.

The government shoe schedule is given up. You pay as much as you like for your shoes. Women may resume concentrating attention on the feet, to the neglect of the head.

A gentleman representing employers says that wages must come down right away. He doesn't say anything about the price of food.

Gompers replies that wages will stay where they are. He doesn't say where the employers are to get the money, the men to find new jobs for old or who is to keep the workman from taking less if he can't get more.

The picnic is over for capital and labor. Both would be wise if, under government direction and control, they would agree to a sane adjustment without fights.

If the men beat the employers they won't force them to hire anybody. If the employers beat the men, the fight will cost them more than they will save in wages, and cost them perhaps more than peace of mind.
